ETIQUETTE OF NAVY BROKEN BY MAGRUDER

Is Only Issue on Which Department Acts to Curb Rear Admiral

STATEMENT AROUSES IRE

Press Interviews Displease Department; Can Give Views at Capital

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1927 by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—Naval etiquette and a respect for navy regulations is the only issue which the navy department recognizes in the case of Rear Admiral Magruder. Had the admiral confined his criticisms of naval policy to articles leading with naval affairs and eliminated some of his interviews with the press which followed he probably would not have aroused the ire of his superior.

Again, if the admiral had addressed his request for an interview with President Coolidge to the Secretary of the Navy in the regular channel of communication for naval officers, his request might not have been denied.

There is no disposition here to carry on any punitive campaign against Admiral Magruder. So far as the president is concerned the incident is closed and there is no talk of further disciplinary measures.

NO HARM IN DISCUSSION

If Admiral Magruder had made his criticisms in a period of real emergency he would have been seriously reprimanded. But it is realized that this is a time of comparative quiet in matters of naval policy and there is no harm in an open discussion of such questions as economy of construction and the handling of naval yards.

The secretary of the navy has been disposed from the start to regard the admiral a martyr. In ordering Admiral Magruder to Washington, the intention is to have him in the navy department, where day by day he can express his views and make his suggestions instead of to the press in interviews that condemn the executive staff and the secretary himself by implication.

Admiral Magruder has the option always of resigning from the navy and expressing himself freely in newspapers and periodicals and in public meetings just as have some of the retired officers like Admiral Fiske and Admiral Sims but while on active duty the feeling of the navy department is that a naval officer should give the benefit of his service and counsel to his superior first before appealing to the public through the press.

MRS. GRAYSON BACK FROM CONFAB WITH CHAMBERLIN

Old Orchard, Me.—(AP)—Having conferred in Boston with Clarence D. Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic flier, Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson was back in Old Orchard Saturday awaiting favorable weather for a fourth attempt to fly to Copenhagen.

To those who suggested that she had attempted to obtain the noted flier's services in place of Wilmer Stultz, pilot with whim she admittedly has had differences, Mrs. Grayson denied that the man who carried the first passenger over the Atlantic had been asked to join the crew of her amphibian plane, the Dawn. She declared she and Stultz were on amicable terms and said her talk with Chamberlin had been solely for advice. Stultz himself denied he would quit the projected flight, although he admitted he had twice submitted his resignation.

Russian Singer Seeks Divorce In Moscow Suit

SEEKS DIVORCE

FEODOR CHALIAPIN

New York—(AP) — Feodor Chaliapin, noted basso, who left Russia in 1906 to become "a citizen of the world," is seeking a divorce in Moscow from his Russian wife, a former dancer.

His 54-year-old wife, Yolle Ignatievna, who is in Moscow, received notice of the divorce action by the publication of court an item announcing the filing of the suit by a singer in a Moscow paper Vechernaya Moskva. Papers were forwarded to the Moscow court through the soviet consul general at Paris In the petition, the basso offered his wife $300 monthly alimony during her life. Divorce procedure in Russia is simple, since under the present law marriage is purely a civil contract and a certificate attesting its severance costs 50 cents.

Madame Chaliapin, who had been with her husband almost continuously during his world-wide travels begun in 1906, returned to Moscow in September, 1926. At various times the soviet authorities have denied that the singer also return. Finally in August of this year he was divested of his rank as "people's artist of the soviet republic" by the council of commissars. This break between him and Russia followed his donation of $5,000 to Russian emigres

Eight children were born of the basso's marriage. Irene Feodorovna, the eldest, an actress was with her mother in Moscow when they learned of the suit. Madame Chaliapin was stricken by the news, Irene said.

In an interview on his arrival for the meeting Congressman Boylan expressed the belief that Governor Al Smith of New York will be the next president.

STEAMER HITS FISHING BOAT; CREW MISSING

Liner Reports Rescue of 3 Men Out of Crew of Between 20 and 25

New York—(AP)—The Independent Wireless Telegraph Co announced receipt of a radio message from the liner President Wilson, saying the vessel had been in collision with a fishing schooner which foundered and sank about 200 miles east of Boston at 4:15, eastern standard time, Saturday morning. The liner said it was standing by in an effort to rescue the crew and had asked for aid from a revenue cutter.

The collision occurred in a dense fog. The President Wilson sailed from New York Friday for Palermo, Italy, by way of Boston.

THREE ARE RESCUED

Boston—(AP)—The fishing schooner rammed and sunk by the steamer President Wilson was identified in wireless messages picked up here as the Avalon, of Gloucester, Mass It carried a crew of between 20 and 25 men. The coast guard cutter Ossipee was reported steaming to the scene of the disaster.

Commercial fishermen, some time ago, detected a sunken object with their nets. Returning this week to make more complete investigation of their findings the car was discovered and, this morning, after punching holes in the top of the automobile the body was brought to the surface.

Mrs. Barney disappeared from Milwaukee, Jan. 24, 1925, in company with Henry Geisen her employers. Geise's body was found in the river four months later, on April 7, but no clew was found to reveal the whereabouts of the auto or its woman occupant.

Badger Officials Get Kick Out Of 'Big Bill'

Chicago—(AP)—A dash of George M. Cohan's "Grand Old flag" a touch of Stephen Decatur's "My country, right or wrong" and a taste of opera bouffe season. Mayor Thompson's American First efforts Saturday.

His appeal for support of the "America First Foundation" with a $10 membership fee, brought many returns. Some were complimentary, not a few were condemnatory. Several were ironic.

The plea for members in the foundation, a national patriotic organization "for better citizenship, based on loyalty with a nation-wide educational program to teach the constitution of the United tSates and respect for our ferm of government and a thorough konwledge of its fundamental laws," was telegraphed to mayors, congressmen, senators and governors.

Mayor Thompson found little support from Wisconsin cities.

Mayor D. W. Hoan of Milwaukee, was the first to decline the invitation of the Chicago executive to help launch the foundation for the small sum of $10 and Mayor A. C. Rule of Appleton, Mayor H. F. Kitz of Oshkosh, Mayor William McGill of Beloit, declined to get back of the new movement.

"I know nothing about operation of schools," said Mayor Rule. "Appleton hires men to operate its schools and I believe they are capable It is not my business to endeavor to run the schools "

"Ten dollars bills are too scarce," said Mayor Kitz of Oshkosh "When the bronze lions on the library steps come to life, I'll be pleased to contribute."

From Beloit, Mayor William Magill cautioned: "Don't let King George buy you off." He added, "Wisconsin's pro-British conservation commission protects English pheasants, introducted into this state by King George to make our loyal Germans dissatisfied with spare ribs and sauerkraut. In the name of the 100 per cent Americans, can't you do anything about it? Under your starry banner we will fight for the complete extermination of English pheasants, English sparrows and English bull dogs In all the world, Bill, there is no one like you "

William McAndrew, superintendent of schools, now under trial as a result of Mayor Thompson's campaign pledge to oust him, found a supporter in Mayor Elvin Swarthout, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"I quite indorse the proposed object of your new crusade," he said, "but I am wondering whether your career guarantees proper leadership. Your persecution of my old college mate, McAndrews, gives me pause.

"Then I've been told you are no valiant supporter of the eighteenth amendment. Can the blind lead to the blind? I'll think further before I send my $10." Another reply from Congressman Emmanuel Celler, Brooklyn, N. Y., read:

"Were you not so enthusiastically misguided in your campaign against anything British, and were it not for your raid on the Chicago library I might consider your proposal seriously, but your anti-British mania has made you ridiculous in the eyes of the intelligent people."

To which Mayor Thompson rejoined telegraphically:

"Sorry you wasted so much money in such a long telegram and, if you are not beyond advice, permit me to suggest that you should not use the word intelligent over your own signature If you had more brains you would learn the truth before spending money in long telegrams."

Despite the mingling of brickbats and bouquets, the mayor has declared himself satisfied with the results.

WAUPACA MEN ADMIT HOLDING LOST GEMS

Found Bag Owned by Illinois Woman and Divided Spoils, They Confess

Waupaca—Harry Peterson of this city, arrested Monday at Fond du Lac, and brought here the following day, on suspicion of possessing jewelry lost by Mrs. Martha Johnson of Evanston, Ill., has confessed that he found the jewels and attempted to dispose of them, according to local police. The authorities have been conducting a search for his brother, Henry, in connection with the same offense.

Upon notification of Peterson's arrest in Fond du Lac, Police Chief William Ware and Officer Arthur Hewitt questioned Allie McMahan, and, leading him to believe that Peterson had confessed, wrung the admission from him that the three had found the jewelry at the corner of Main and Badger-sts, shortly after Mrs. Johnson lost it, in August, 1926. Peterson was then confronted with McMahan's statement and he confessed. The bag contained jewelry, mostly diamonds which were valued as heirlooms, appraised at about $3,000, and $50 in money.

According to McMahan's story, he took $25 of the money and a ring. The rest, he said, was divided between the Peterson brothers, who promised him his share as soon a they had disposed of the jewelry. The two men are being held, pending a search for Henry Peterson.

Harry Peterson was arrested in Fond du Lac when he attempted to dispose of part of the jewelry.

SEE POLITICAL PLOT IN RUMANIAN THEFT

Carol's Villa Burglarized More Than Week Ago; Papers Reported Taken

Paris—(AP)—The foiling of Carolist plans in Rumania and the arrest of M. Manoilescu, former under secretary of finances of Rumania Saturday appeared to be directly connected with the burglarizing of the villa of Former Crown Prince Carol at Neuilly Carol's valet, on being questioned by the police, admitted that the theft of papers belonging to Carol took place more than a week ago, but since he had been left to guard the villa he was afraid to say anything about it at the time.

He eventually told the whole story of how he had been lured from his post of duty by a woman, to a friend of Carol. The friend informed the police, who started an investigation and telegraphed Carol at Saint Malo, to return.

Police at present, although regarding the valet's story with some suspicion that he is concealing something favored the theory that the burglary was inspired by politics. It was suggested that the information found in the stolen papers had been abstracted and telegraphed to the Rumanian government. This, it was pointed out, would have led to the capture of Manoilescu with the compromising documents last Monday in Rumania.

FALL-SINCLAIR TRIAL RESTS OVER WEEKEND

Washington, —(AP)— With 10 days of latter legal skirmishing behind, the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial came Saturday to its weekend pause. Counsel for the government looked back on two decisions from the bench distinctly disadvantageous to its cause. Both involved the laying of important evidence before the jury; one the source of $230,500 in liberty bonds which reached M. T. Everhart Fall's son-in-law and business associate, shortly after the Teapot Dome lease was signed, and the other Sinclair's statement before the senate investigating committee that his renowned "Christmas visit" to Fall at the latter's New Mexico ranch in 1921 was for the purpose of opening negotiations for a lease on the Wyoming naval oil reserve.

Government counsel looked with satisfaction, however, upon its success Friday in connecting Sinclair directly with the Continental Trading company, Ltd. of Canada, which at one time held the bonds that eventually reached Everhart.

RUTH HONORS UNKNOWN HERO WITH WREATH

Lays Flowers at Arc de Triomphe While French Stand Silently by

Paris —(AP)— The first official pilgrimage of Ruth Elder in Paris was to the tomb of the French unknown soldier. Accompanied by her co-pilot, George W. Haldeman, she placed a beautiful wreath of flowers there Saturday morning, while several thousand persons stood silent around the Arc de Triomphe

Ruth arrived at the tomb nearly an hour after the scheduled time for her appearance. Patiently the crowd waited. It was an entirely different Ruth Elder who emerged from an American embassy automobile in front of the Napoleonic monument from the boyishly attired girl they had seen at Le Bourget flying field Friday.

Ruth was stylishly attired in a mink fur coat, reaching below her knees and covering a sea-green tailor-made suit. She also wore a togue of the same sea green color and stockings to match.

There were gasps of admiration from the feminine section of the crowd. "Doesn't she look sweet," they said. "She is late, but it was for a good reason."

WITH AIR NOTABLES

Miss Elder glanced about her as if in a daze. She hesitated. Her eyes appeared to be filling with tears. Then she resolutely marched up the path leading to the tomb, preceding Major Earton K. Young, air attache at the American embassy, and Sidney V. Veit, president of the Paris chapter of the National Aeronautic association.

Miss Elder, without a word, laid the wreath on the marble slab. She then walked around the tomb. She shook hands with its multilated watchman, Ernest Ardom, a war veteran.

"It is a great honor for me to shake your hand," the veteran said. Ruth closed her eyes. Her lips moved as if in prayer and the touching little ceremony was over.

Miss Elder's contagious Le Bourget smile was missing. She was evidently laboring under great emotion as she told the chauffeur "drive me back to the hotel. I want to have a little rest."

Paris has taken Ruth to its heart. Youth and beauty are perennial attractions to Parisians and they agree she has plenty of both.

Everybody is touched by her thought of paying her respects to the mother of Charles Nungesser, the French hero, whose fate she so nearly shared. She has revealed herself as a worthy rival to Lindbergh in the art of saying just the right thing.

CAR IS FORCED INTO DITCH BY BLOCKED ROAD

John J. Mitchell, Sr., Dies in Doctor's Office — Wife Killed Instantly

WERE RETURNING HOME

Banker Headed Second Largest Financial Institution in Chicago

Chicago—(AP)—John J. Mitchell, Sr., 74, chairman of the board of Chicago's second greatest financial institution, the Illinois Merchants Trust company, died in a doctor's office in Libertyville Ill 35 miles from here, shortly after he had been injured Saturday in an automobile accident, which also claimed the life of Mrs. Mitchell

Mrs. Mitchell was killed instantly when the heavy closed motor car in which they were riding turned entirely around and plunged into a roadside ditch, after the chauffeur hurriedly applied the brakes in an effort to avoid crashing into a crowd gathered about two automobiles which had crashed just ahead of the Mitchell car.

Mr and Mrs. Mitchell were returning to Chicago from their summer home, Ceylon Court, at Lake Geneva, Wis., where they had been summer residents for years. They had just closed their home.

BATTLED FOR LIFE

When Mr Mitchell was rescued from the smashed automobile it was believed, he too was dead, but Dr. John L. T. Taylor of Libertyville, found a spark of life still glowing faintly and for more than an hour and a half fought a futile battle to save the banker's life, although Mr. Mitchell had suffered injuries to his head and chest which foretold death. Attie, and William Mitchell, and his wife, the former Lolita Armour, were with Mr. Mitchell in Dr. Taylor's Libertyville office.

The Mitchell chauffeur was not seriously injured. He was driving through a dense fog under difficulties and the Mitchell machine was almost upon the roadside gathering about the wrecked vehicles before he realized his position and hurriedly applied the brakes The Mitchell automobile described a complete circle on the wet pavement before it swerved off the hard road and toppled into the ditch wheels up and nose pointed in the direction from which it had been traveling.

Dr. Taylor said that the injuries fatal to Mr. Mitchell were a fracture of the skull at the base of the brain and internal injuries.

The accident occurred on state route No. 21, two and one half miles north of Libertyville, which is about 35 miles northwest of Chicago.

CAUSE OF ACCIDENT

Bert Finstead, a Libertyville man, had turned out of the road to pass a hayrack and had crashed into a motor car coming from the other direction, according to the accounts of witnesses. The collision and the crowd which gathered blocked the highway.

The great financial institution headed by Mr. Mitchell is Chicago's second ranking bank. He was called from retirement to head it after it had been formed by a merger of the Merchants Loan and Trust company, the Illinois Trust and Savings bank and the Corn Exchange bank in 1923, four years after he had given up activity in the financial world.

HEADED BANK AT 26

Emulating his father in choosing banking as his life work, Mr. Mitchell became president of a Chicago bank at 26, was acclaimed one of that city's greatest financiers at 40.

On one occasion it is related that P. D. Armour sent to the bank from the floor of the stock exchange a hurry call for a loan of $100,000, but the young bank president sent back word that he could not recognize Mr. Armour's request without sufficient guarantee for the loan. The transaction finally was consummated on Mr. Mitchell's terms and his determination to stick to the bank's rule made a firm friend of Mr Armour.

The Illinois Trust prospered under the guidance of Mr. Mitchell and in 20 years its deposits grew from $1,000,000 to $6[illegible].

He was a member of the boards of several other Chicago and New York financial institutions and was a director of five railway companies and many large business enterprises

Mr Mitchell in 1881 married Mary Louise Jewett of Bristol, R. I., who was killed with him. They had three sons and two daughters.

COMMUNITY BUILDING CAMPAIGN RECEIVES NATIONAL ATTENTION

Commerce Department Officials Give High Praise to Local Work

Appleton community builders' campaign received nation-wide attention this week at 13th annual convention of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries held Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in Columbus, O. Officials of the domestic commerce department of the United States government rated community building plans gathered from all cities of the nation where the program is being tried and they called Appleton's plan, "one of the best-balanced campaians to advertise a city to its own citizens" and advised the delegates to study it. The men requested that copies of every piece of material used be sent to the department at Washington D. C. for its conference files.

Rush G. Cribbett, secretary of the local chamber, attended the meeting and was chairman of one of the discussion groups for chamber secretaries in cities of from 20,000 to 50,000 population. Thirteen Wisconsin secretaries were in attendance, including three from Milwaukee and others from Sheboygan, Green Bay, Oshkosh, Wausau, Eau Claire, Madison, Antigo and Appleton.

Outstanding papers of the four-day session were Advertising Tours and Exhibits by Roger Miller, manager of the Asheville, N. C., chamber; An Analysis of Present Day Industrial Development Movements, by Roland B Woodwards, secretary of the Rochester, N. Y., chamber and Industrial Financing and Revolving Funds, by F. B. Ayres. Speakers at the final banquet Wednesday evening were Governor Donahey of Ohio and C. A. Eaton, New Jersey congressman.

The next great strike will be a strike of taxpayers, Gov. Donahey said. The taxpayer would be more than willing to pay if he felt he was getting his money's worth, but he never knows where the money goes. Mr. Donahey said and suggested the erection of a billboard in each city, containing a large circle. Various colors on the circle would denote the amount of money which goes for each thing, such as the amount the city gets, and the amount which goes to the county, the state, the schools and others.

PLAN ISSUANCE OF PERMIT FOR SURVEY

Indications Are That Protests of Izaak Walton League Will Be Overruled

Washington, D. C.— A permit to make preliminary surveys for a power project on the Menominee Indian reservation may be issued in the near future, indications here show. Nothing definite has been done on the case since the action some time ago of the tribal council of the Menominees, in ratifying the stand taken by the delegation headed by C. A. Lawe of Keshena which was sent here for a conference with the federal water power commission in June.

The Indians at that time asked that the plan be delayed until congressional action could be taken on their request to have the money derived from the project turned over directly to them, rather than having it placed on their account in the treasury to be administered by the bureau of Indian affairs. The commission promised the Indians that no permit would be sought until the Indians had approved the plans.

Many protests have been received from the Izaak Walton league and civic organizations in Wisconsin opposing the project on the ground that the site on the Wolf river is the last stand of virgin timber in the state and that the dam would ruin one of the most picturesque spots in that section of the country. However, there appaers to be a tendency in Washington to disregard these protests largely on the ground that the organizations and persons making them are motivated by selfish interests rather than by a desire to see the Indians make the most of their holdings.

The Indians who came back here claim that the project is the only means the tribe has of capitalizing on its land holdings.

CLERK GETS SUPPLY OF TAGS FOR TRAPS

A shipment of 2,000 trap tags was received by John E. Hantschel, county clerk, Friday morning and more than 1,000 of these were sent to trappers who secured licenses but were unable to get the tags because the supply here had been exhausted. The total number of trapping permits issued up to the present time is about 200. The 200 trappers have approximately 2,000 tags, meaning there will be about that number of traps out.

Melody Way Piano Lessons Start In Wednesday Paper

The Melody way of piano lessons will commence in the Wednesday issue of the Post-Crescent.

Every person, regardless of age, sex and previous knowledge of music will have equal opportunity to learn to play the piano—and it won't cost them a cent.

If you have ever sighed, "I wish I could play the piano! But what's the use" I haven't any old kind of piano to begin on!"—why here's your chance. At least it can be yours for the asking. No more laborious finger exercises; no more back-breaking and mind racking study of the scale. Just sit right down and play a piece in your first lesson. And you don't even need a piano to do it!

So effective is the Post-Crescent's Melody Way that it is now being used in over 300 schools all over the nation. More than 200,000 persons all over the country have learned to play through this system. It has been taught here in the public schools and will be resumed this year. Lessons to be offered in the Post-Crescent each Wednesday, starting Nov. 2, will be the same as taught in schools and may be learned without any outside assistance.

At a later date classes will be established for those who want individual instruction, but this instruction is not at all necessary and every person who starts the course in the beginning will be able to play ordinary music with both hands at the conclusion of 12 lessons.

The Post-Crescent will print a piano keyboard on Monday, which readers will be asked to clip, mount on cardboard and keep for practice. The keyboard takes the place of the piano.

APPLETON SCHOOL PUPILS PLANT TREES TO STUDY FORESTRY

Keshena Nursery Forester Donates Pine Trees for Planting by Students

Small trees were planted Thursday and Friday by the science classes of Appleton Junior high schools as part of their work in forestry. The trees are from one to five years old, those of the same age occupying the same box. These are arranged to show the comparative growth of the trees from year to year.

Lloyd O. Grapp, forester for the Indian reservation at Keshena, Wis., and graduate of the Forestry school of the University of Minesota, thought the project of the junior high schools of Appleton so fine that he donated the trees. The reservation maintains a forest nursey with a capacity of 1,000,000 trees. Mr. Grapp plans to visit Appleton after the project is well under way to see what has been accomplished.

The trees are species of pine. The one-year-old trees are Scotch pine; the two-and three-year-old trees, white pine; four-year-old trees, Norway pine, and the five-year-old trees, spruce. Seeds will be taken from pine cones and planted, thus enabling the pupils to watch the entire process of tree development and growth.

The social and economic angle of the study of forestry is a new approach to the subject. Appleton schools as far as can be determined are the only institutions of the kind making such a thorough and first-hand analysis of the field.

A study in citizenship as well as in science is incorporated in the course, for such issues as forest conservation, the age of a tree in comparison to the life of a man, the responsibility to generations to come are some of the topics considered.

The exploratory sciences developed in the Appleton junior high schools aim to give the pupil an idea of the various fields of activity, to form a background from which the pupil may formulate an idea of the opportunities in each field. A selection of the line of work in which he is most interested may then be made more wisely.

TEN COUNTIES PLAN RHINELANDER EXHIBIT

Fred Sargent Will Be Principal Speaker on Program of Show

Rhinelander —(AP)— More than 200 individual entries and ten county entries have been made in the state potato show to be held here Nov. 1-4, according to officials in charge of the show.

The Wisconsin Potato Growers' Association, under whose auspices the show is to be held, was organized in 1912, and the first show was held in Rhinelander in 1913. The purpose of the organization according to its constitution, is to promote the raising of pure varieties of potatoes, to give special attention to seed improvement, and to promote community plan for raising desirable varieties of potatoes. Through its cooperation with the college of agriculture, the association has served as a field agency in promoting activities among potato producers, and it has sponsored the annual potato tour.

The last day of the potato show will be given over to rural and graded school activities, in charge of Walter McNeel, of the boys and girls clubs division of the College of Agriculture. Features of the day include a contest in judging and identification of standard varieties of potatoes, a program of speeches, music and stunts, with a final award of prizes to contestant winners.

AROUSE INTEREST IN TRAINING COURSE FOR BOY LEADERS

Select Dates for School to Instruct Leaders for Valley Scout Troops

Literature announcing the boy leadership course of the valley council of the boy scouts is being given to persons who might be interested in the course and to potential scout leaders in the council district which comprises Appleton, Neenah and Menasha. The 'leadership' course will be open to all scout leaders, teachers, Sunday school teachers, leaders, employers, parents and other men interested in boys and will give a fundamental and methodical idea of how the boy scout program may be administered.

The course will be of especial interest to new and prospective boy scout leaders, progressive scout masters, assistants and troop committeemen who are looking for new ideas for their troops. Enrollment does not, however, incur obligation as a scout leader.

Efforts have been made to condense the course into a program from which the maximum of information in the minimum of time may be obtained. The course will include six indoor sessions and an overnight camp, covering in a thorough informal way the fundamentals of scouting and the methods of making it attractive to the boys.

The scouting principal of "learning by doing" will be closely followed. Men taking the course will be organized into a model boy scout troop for the entire series of meetings, and each evening's program will be presented in typical scout fashion.

The first three meetings of the course will be held in the Appleton high school gymnasium and the remaining three at some place to be selected at Neenah-Menasha. Each meeting will start at 7:30 in the evening and close at 9:30. The first indoor session will be held Nov. 16 the others following on Nov. 18, 23, 25, 30 and Dec. 2. A fee of $2 is to be charged persons taking the work to offset the costs of materials to be used. Those who satisfactorily complete the course will be awarded a "leadership training certificate" by the national department of education of the boy scouts.

COOKING CLUBS TO GIVE PROGRAM HERE NOV. 3

Four cooking clubs—Seymour, Shiocton, Hortonville, Greenville and Mackville—will be in charge of the County Achievement Day program at Appleton Womans club on Nov. 3. The session will open at 10 o'clock.

Members of the clubs have been studying nutrition and cooking during the past year under the direction of Miss Edna Hoffman, food specialist of the University of Wisconsin, who conducted monthly cooking classes in each group. Each club will present a stunt as part of the program.

Miss Mary Irene Hart of the Mirror Aluminum Goods company, Manitowoc, will be the chief speaker at the morning session. She will demonstrate cake making and cake decoration.

Mrs. Nellie Kedzie Jones of the college of agriculture, Madison, will talk on home making at the afternoon program. A luncheon will be served at noon by the county department of Appleton Womans club.

BOARD WITHDRAWS PLEA FOR $150,000 ADDITIONAL MONEY

Reject All Bids for New Schools. Asks Council to Abandon Special Election

Neenah — The request from the board of education for an additional appropriation of $150,000 for school purposes has been withdrawn and the council will be asked to abandon the proposed referendum vote which was to have been held on Nov. 8. This was decided at a special meeting of the school board held Friday evening at which all bids on the new Senior high and vocational buildings were rejected.

The boards took the action with deep sense of responsibility, not only for the educational needs of the children, but also for the expense to the taxpayers, it was said. In view of the fact that in the next few years the city will be faced with the necessity of building a new First ward school, it was the general belief that the proposed present school expenditures be held strictly within the limits requested and provided two years ago, even though this action requires the revision and the curtailment of the plan submitted by the architect, and further delay in starting the new high school.

New plans will be called for to come within the funds available.

TRAFFIC GUIDE LINES PAINTED ON STREETS

Neenah — New traffic lines were painted Friday by street department upon the pavement at intersection of Wisconsin-ave and Commercial-st and at S. Commercial-st and Doty-ave.

The white lines on the pavement at all times are to the left of the driver. In making a right turn the lines keep the driver close to the corner. In making the left turn the new regulation keeps the driver close to the line but does not permit him to go into the center to make the turn. A large white circle has been painted in the center which, on a left turn, is to the right of the driver who must drive between the line and the center circle. No driver will be allowed to go around the white spot but must go between it and the white line. An ordinance is to be adopted at the next meeting of the city council, making this new regulation a city law and those who do not regard it as such will be arrested.

HEALTH PARAMOUNT OBJECT IN SCHOOLS

Physical Education Embraces Activities for Welfare of Children

Milwaukee—(AP)—Health is considered the first objective in education, and physical education embraces all activities which look toward the physical welfare of the child, Wisconsin's physical education instructors were told Thursday morning by Dr. James F. Rogers, Washington, D. C. Dr. Rogers is chief of the division of physical education and social hygiene of the U. S. bureau of education.

"Physical education is the art of ministering to the physical impluses and needs so fundamental to the welfare of the child," said Dr. Rogers. "Whether or not it ministers wisely to these impluses and needs depends on the training and judgment of the physical educator. It may or it may not maintain or improve health; it may or it may not improve ethical standards.

"Thirty-five states have passed laws requiring physical education in public schools," he asserted "In passing these laws the legislators took large views on the subject, and had in mind the production of a people relatively free from physical defects and disease as well as a people enjoying the pleasure of play and possessing the quality of good sportsmanship.

"It is one thing to pass a law and another to make it thoroughly effective. Schools need help and direction in introducing or handling a new subject. Fifteen states have found it wise to appoint state directors to supervise and stimulate their activities in hygiene and physical activity throughout their states, and, as is to be expected, this work is progressing more favorable in such states.

"The task of doing away with the physical defects and disease by which the child is hampered throughout his school days and to which the adult becomes heir, is not one which will be accomplished in a day," said Dr. Rogers. "It will require adequate research and full application of what we know through all forms of school health work. We can, however, at the present time, offer the child the opportunity for, and supervision of, the healthful expression of his tendencies to physical activity which is so large a factor in his healthful development.

"We need more playgrounds and physical education. The rank and file of pupils must not be neglected at the expense of the very athletic who need least attention."

TEACHING LAUDED AS FINEST PROFESSION

Levitan Advises All Youths Who Can Afford It to Go to College

Stevens Point—(AP)—Solomon Levitan, state treasurer, Saturday told members of the Portage-co Teachers association of the benefits of their profession, of education and told them they were "in position to render a greater service to our nation than the members of any other profession."

Outlining the "vastness" of the teachers' responsibility in charge of practically all of the youth of the country, he said:

"The chief purpose of the schools should be to train our young people in high ideals of manhood and womanhood and to keep before them a high standard of citizenship and loyalty to government. I believe the schools are accomplishing this purpose in a large degree and I am glad to notice the general trend of educators to emphasize the importance of this phase of training.

"Educators always should be open to improved methods of teaching, not that they should accept every proposal of a change, but an attitude of alertness to find a better way will help them to discriminate between the practical and impractical. I am interested in the experiment being tested out in our University by President Glenn Frank, in which 120 University freshmen and eleven faculty members are trying out an entirely new method of instruction, new at least to our University, although Dr. Frank tells us the plan is as old as time. These students will study how to meet situations rather than merely learn certain subjects. We cannot tell how practical this will prove to be, but at least it is worth finding out.

"Education is a continuing experience. School is just a workshop in which to learn how to handle tools. I know from experience that it means to be without those tools. It means doing everything the hard way. Any boy or girl who is not forced by necessity to earn his or her own support who gives up a high school or university education to go to work is short-sighted.

"There are certain fundamentals that every method of instruction should impart, such as thoroughness, earnestness of purpose and scrupulous honesty. With these as the basis of instruction and of learning, there can be no failures."

BANDMASTERS WILL DISCUSS MERITS OF MUSIC INSTRUCTION

Study Difficulties Encountered by Music Units in Schools

Milwaukee— (AP) —School superintendents, principals and bandmasters will discuss the success of the school band movement in Wisconsin, the difficulties school musical units sometimes encounter and means of improving school bands and musical instruction at a meeting here Nov. 2.

According to the Wisconsin School Band, official magazine of the association, out Saturday:

"When comparison is made with other states, we believe that Wisconsin has a means of classification that is the fairest and the best in the Union. It is based upon the many years' experience of some of the best men that any state can boast of, men who are not only school men but band men as well. Even though they may be well-nigh perfect, there still may be an idea in some one's mind that may be valuable. Exchange of ideas will prove whether it is or not."

The magazine announces that one of the points to be discussed is a round-table meeting after the state band tournament, at which the judges might explain the good and bad points of the winning and losing bands.

The meeting is held on the first day of the state teacher's convention so that many of the members who would otherwise be unable to attend may benefit by both conventions. All school officers have been invited, regardless of the status of band music in their schools.

The Wisconsin School Band Association officers are: H. S. Bonar, president, Richland Center; J. B. Layde, vice president, West De Pere; O. H. Gilbert, secretary-treasurer, Lincoln high school, Milwaukee.

Board of Control: E. C. Moore, Green Bay; Vese Walker, Milwaukee; Otto H. Brown, Viroqua.

The music committee is composed of the following: Peter Michelsen, Richland Center; H. J. Rydahl, chairman, Algoma; Alex P. Enna, West De Pere.

RAILWAYS OBJECT TO AUTO FREIGHT LINES

Claim Their Service Adequate and no Supplementary Lines Needed

Perhaps the best indication as to how the public travels when it makes comparatively short trips has been evident in connection with hearings of the Wisconsin Railroad commission throughout the state on the issuance of permits to common carriers other than railroads, in accordance with the legislation of July of this year requiring all common carriers, both passenger and freight, to be licensed by the commission

In almost every hearing conducted by the commission in which freight carriers asked for a permit, their applications have been objected to by railroads, claiming that their service is adequate and that there is no need for supplementary service in freight transportation.

But in the case of bus companies applying for permits to carry passengers, the railroads have almost without exception remained silent and made no objection to the granting of the licenses. Which would indicate that freight hauling is the mainstay of the roads and that they have no objections to anyone else's carrying the passengers.

This is only one of the evidences that motor passenger transportation is fast replacing rail travel Interurban electric lines have scarcely been able to exist during that period of the year when the roads are passable and public utilities companies are gradually replacing their electric service with motor busses throughout the state But the bulk of travel is in automobiles privately owned, and the volume of passenger transportation business becomes less and less as the years go by.

Harvesting sugar beets is occupying the time of Outagamie-co farmers at present and as a result railroads out of Appleton are daily shipping from three to six cars of beets to Green Bay. WHY KINGS ARE ON THE RUN

The absurdities of the "king" system where it is not completely circumscribed and controlled by constitutional government are being painfully exhibited in the case of Roumania. Here was an heir presumptive to the throne who made a mess of his life and was forced by reprehensible conduct to renounce his rights. That he is totally unfit for the responsibility of ruling Roumania needs no further proof than he has himself furnished. He is an outcast and an exile for the best of reasons. This flippant young highroller is living near Paris with a woman to whom he is not married. He has been in other scrapes of the kind before. He cares more about cheap women than he does about his wife and family and his country.

Yet Roumania is threatened with a revolution ostensibly because of this renegade prince's ambition to return and claim the royal rights he renounced. It is inconceivable that a single life should be lost in behalf of so dissolute a person or so worthless a cause. Of course, the facts are that the Carolist movement is that of the opposition to the present ruling forces. The outs want to get in and throw out the ins. Carol is their stalking horse. Ambitious politicians and alleged statesmen want to overthrow the Bratiano regime and install themselves in the places of power and luxury. Nothing for the real good of Roumania can be involved, and certainly it could not be if it depended upon the services of the youth over in France who is living with Madame Lupescu. The people are the pawns in this conflict of greed and intrigue. Roumania is threatened with an application of seventeenth century monarchial standards.

It is such demonstrations that have put kings on the run all over Europe, and that will sooner or later drive them out of even backward countries like Roumania. Great Britain has preserved the system in name only, because it has made its king a titular ruler who merely personifies the power and dignity of a government in which he has no part and which is completely out of his hands.

THE TREND OF THE TIME

The Protestant Episcopal church in the United States has gone on record as favoring repeal of the 18th amendment. That is to say, 2500 of its clergymen, by a vote of almost two to one, have declared prohibition to be a failure as a solution for intemperance. Without commenting upon the inconsistency of voting both for modification of the Volstead act and repeal of the 18th amendment, it is sufficient to note that these leaders of religious faith have condemned the experiment with complete prohibition. They have further declared that it has had sufficient trial. We add this latter conclusion not because we think it is warranted, but to complete the record.

Over in Detroit Mayor John W. Smith is running for re-election on a boldly proclaimed platform of an unrestrained liquor supply for that city. The mayor says his own cellar is never empty and he proposes to let the populace have all of everything it desires to drink. There are said to be 15,000 blind pigs in Detroit, and the mayor is proud of it. He is opposed by the Anti-Saloon league, the Detroit Citizens league and moral organizations. We venture no prediction as to the outcome of the election.

We mention the stand of the Protestant Episcopal church and the mayorality campaign in Detroit as showing the trend of the times. Three or four years ago either would have shocked the country. Today both seem to be taken for granted. A great and growing change has come over the nation. The forces of repeal are gaining strength and confidence. Unless prohibition and enforcement can show vastly different results in the next year [illegible] and this seems impossible [illegible] the [illegible] of the federal government in enforcement [illegible] and [illegible] and the increasing withdrawal of cooperation by states and communities, the amendment would seem to be doomed. The difficulties of repeal are extremely great. It will require an overwhelming preponderance of opinion to accomplish it. But the straws are blowing that way.

DEFINES EDUCATION

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university has defined education in a manner that convinces us that but few of us have understood what education really is. In the words of Mr. Butler:

> There is a popular notion that somehow, somewhere and at some time, it is formally begun and then formally finished. Nothing is further from the fact. There is an odd notion, spread abroad with much emphasis, that education is only a process by which more or less active human vacuums distressingly give measurable evidence of their vacuity and laboriously and painfully learn that fire is hot by burning their own fingers.
> Education worthy of the name holds to the profound and fundamental truth that human experience has already come a long way from its crude and simple beginnings, and that what has been gained so painfully and at so great cost through the long ages each new child is entitled to be helped to know, in order to shorten the time that he is to be enslaved in ignorance, and in order to lengthen the time and to strengthen the weapons in which and by which he is to gain true knowledge and use it.

Education, then, is not merely pouring a mass of selected, pre-digested facts into vacuous heads just for the sake of filling them up. It is a method of handing on to the new-comer the sum of human experience that he may reap the benefit without enduring the pain. It is given systematically so that his ignorance may be relieved in the shortest possible time and he may have left the longest possible time in which to gain new knowledge and apply it, and in turn to pass it on to the next new-comer. Judged from this angle, schools and colleges have departed a long way from a purely educational program.

ENDOWED ACHIEVEMENT

One wonders what Dr. Samuel Johnson, sweating over the dedication to Lord Chesterfield of his majestic dictionary, would have thought of the literary and art fellowships now being offered from many quarters by millionaires and opulent organizations. In those distant days, when life on Grub street was truly grubby, when patrons took much credit and gave but little cash, the idea of endowed research had not arisen. Maecenas sometimes took practical form to help out struggling artists, composers and writers. But seldom with the liberality and never with the absence of restriction permitted by some of the modern foundations.

Assuming the recipients have anything to create, it certainly will be their own fault if under the terms of the fellowships achievement fails to blossom. And yet, one fears a small percentage of recipients are going to ring the bell in such a way that future generations will hear the echoes sounding on along the aisles of time. The ambition to contribute to the sum of human understanding, to add to the store of man-made beauty, is a curious thing. Time and again it triumphs over every obstacle, like Antaeus growing in strength by being downed, and time and again assistance results in its defeat.

In view of Samuel Johnson's failing for procrastination, one wonders if he would have written "Rasselas" on a fellowship as easily and quickly as he wrote it to buy a coffin in which to bury his mother. Though there are exceptions in large numbers, society still believes, as it has for generations, that genius thrives on suffering and want and that the student who pays his own way through college gets more for his money than the student whose way is paid by another.

He's fleeter than the wind.
And when the chamois is in front

EVERY CHILD SHOULD KNOW THIS

The best known way to restore breathing in any case where breathing has ceased from suffocation, submersion (drowning), electric shock, or gas asphyxiation, is Schaefer's prone pressure or manual method of artificial respiration. All authorities agree that this method is not only safer but more efficient in actual practice than is any machine that may be employed for the purpose. The Schaefer method is so simple that every 6 year old child should be prepared to apply it in case of emergency. The method was introduced by Schaefer only 20 years ago and therefore a good many physicians, rather out of touch with scientific progress, have failed to learn about it. Many first aid instructors, swimming instructors, life saving guards and the like have acquired incorrect ideas about the method and have taught the wrong technic. Here is Schaefer's own description, and nobody is qualified to revise or alter Schaefer's directions for this maneuver. Please don't cut this out and paste it up anywhere. Read it, study it, picture it, do it with any volunteer subject. Then you will remember. It is so very easy to remember—really only two ideas and they are conveyed by the name, prone and pressure.

"It consists in laying the subject in the prone posture, preferably on the ground, with a thick folded garment underneath the chest and epigastrium. The operator puts himself athwart or at the side of the subject, facing his head, and places his hands on each side over the lower part of the back (lowest rib). He then slowly throws the weight of his body forward to bear upon his own arms, and thus presses upon the thorax of the subject, and forces air out of the lungs. This being effected, he gradually relaxes the pressure by bringing his own body up again to a more erect position, but without moving the hands."

Prone means lying on the belly or face down. The floor or ground is assumed to be level. If it is on a slope let the subject's head be lower than the body. If there is no garment, blanket or other pad at hand to place under the belly, never mind, but go ahead with the respirations.

Schaefer does not direct that the subject's hand or any other support be placed under the subject's head. His picture shows the subject's hands prone (palms down) beside the head, and the subjects face turned toward one side. This posture, if the ground is level or if the subject's head is not higher than the rest of the body, provides for the drainage of any fluid from the breathing passages, by gravity.

When the operator, kneeling astride or beside the subject, leans the weight of his body forward on his arms he presses down on the lower chest the upper abdomen, against the ground, and so squeezes air (and any fluid) out of the subject's nose or mouth. When the operator relaxes and sits back, the elasticity of the chest wall causes it to rebound and expand, drawing air in through the subject's nose or mouth. The pressure should be repeated 15 times a minute, and never interrupted, not even to move the subject, unless a responsible physician orders the operator to desist. Fairly authentic cases on record indicate that victims may be resuscitated even after 15 minutes of cessation of respiration. Never give up the effort within an hour. Not rarely it takes a half hour or longer to restore normal breathing after only faint signs of life have been observed.

Sterilizing a Brush

I read an article in the ——— magazine in which it is said the use of a toothbrush does more harm than good because the brush is an incubator for disease germs. At school we are taught that the teeth will decay unless a toothbrush is used. Nothing is ever said about sterilizing the brush. How can I sterilize my toothbrush? (M. B.)

Answer—I know of no way, that the toothbrush will stand. The best plan, I think, is to wash the brush well with soap and water, and then hang it where the direct sunlight may get at the germs.

THE FIRST COLD SNAP

HASKIN WRITES TODAY ON—

ECONOMY AND TAX REDUCTION

Washington, D. C. — The campaign launched by the business interests of the country for a reduction in the federal corporation tax, the repeal of the federal estate tax, and the abolition of the war excise taxes on particular businesses has struck a snag in the form of the opposition of President Coolidge.

Big business wants to save $350,000,000, to $400,000,000 by lopping such an amount off its annual tax bill and has set in motion the forces that are expected to bring Congress around to its way of thinking.

President Coolidge is willing that there should be tax reduction and that the corporations of the country should be primarily the beneficiaries of the reduction. However, the President has let it to be known in no uncertain terms that in his judgement big business would be engaged in a more laudable undertaking if it were making a drive to insure economy in government expenditures. There can be no tax reduction without rigid economy in the management of public affairs, and there is little likelihood of economy if Congress at the approaching session is to be subjected to unprecedented pressure from selfish interests as now seems to be in prospect.

Various organizations are now lining up for this drive on Congress and President is understood to be apprehensive as to the result of that sort of thing. Undue tax reduction and extraordinary appropriations for various purposes are the ends sought, and if public opinion is not aroused to combat them, or hold them within bounds, the government financial machine that has been functioning smoothly and with a high degree of efficiency may be seriously deranged.

The President is said to be especially concerned lest through tax reduction the Government's revenues be materially reduced just at the time when it is inevitable that government expenditures will be greatly increased. Flood control for the Mississippi Valley, more cruisers for the Navy, the five-year aircraft building program, increased pensions, and the soldiers, adjusted comjensation will necessitate outlays of the public money at the coming session of Congress and the President does not want the tax reduction movement to gain too much headway before it is definitely known just what those outlays will aggregate.

WHAT BUSINESS INTERESTS WANT

What the business interests of the country want, as shown by the specific recommendations submitted by the United States Chamber of Commerce for the approval of its 1500 member organizations, is that there be immediate reduction and repeals in federal taxes amounting to $400,000,000 in the first year after the changes are made, that the rate of corporate income tax applicable to net income of 1927 shall be not more than 10 per cent, and that Congress provide full opportunity for the Joint Congressional Tax Committee to perfect proposals for revision of federal tax laws and their administration.

Pointing out that the last fiscal year the corporation income tax yielded revenue in excess of $1,300,000,000 or 32 per cent of the total taxes, while in addition state and local jurisdictions are also levying heavy toll on corporations, the taxation committee of the Chamber of Commerce says that not only has there been general discrimination against corporations in that all other tax rates have been reduced or eliminated since the war period, but there is a particular discrimination against corporations as compared with individuals and partnerships, even though the latter may be engaged in the same type of business and competing with corporations.

"Quite apart from any discriminations against corporations as compared to taxes levied on other sources," says the committee, "there is a strong argument for the reduction of the corporation income taxes on the grounds of busniess and industrial development and the general welfare of the country. The characteristic American method of doing business is by means of corporate organization. In manufacturing of all kinds, finance, transportation, communication, in fact in practically every kind of business activity, it is the corporations which are doing not only the great bulk of business, but are also the pioneers in developing new activities, increasing efficiency and reducing costs to the consumer. Any undue burdens placed on the corporation either by taxation or otherwise are obstructing the development of one of the most important instruments of economic progress which have been developed.

"Probably no one thing does as much to simplify the federal tax situation as a reduction in rates. Moderate rates which reduce the hardship which might otherwise ensue no longer make necessary elaborate provisions for the relief of a taxpayer who finds himself in some unusual situation. Taxpayer and government officials both approach the matter in a manner most conducive to speedy agreement. Simplification of the income tax is generally regarded as one of the most pressing of federal tax reforms and there is no surer approach to the solution of this difficult problem than by the reduction of rates to a moderate level.

"While tax reductions are always acceptable to taxpayers, yet revenues must be sufficient to support the Government on a reasonable basis. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, the Federal Government not only paid expenses including the sinking fund of over $333,000,000 for the retirement of the national debt, but there was a huge surplus of over $635,000,000. Analysis of the pertinent facts indicates that the reduction of the corporate income tax to 10 per cent, which the repeal of the federal estate tax and the abolition of the war excise taxes on particular business could all be accomplished without interfering with the normal fiscal operations of the Government."

Tax reduction now should proceed to a point that will substantially absorb any potential Treasury surplus, it is argued by the business interests. Surpluses as large as those realized in recent years mean that more money is being token from the taxpayer than is needed to meet the current expenses of the Government and while the pecular uncertainties of the recent past may be held to have justified a wide margin of safety in estimates, no such justification now exists.

A large surplus is too much of a temptation to Congress, according to the proponents of tax reduction, "while on the other hand a very potential restraining influence either on the legislature or the administration is the knowledge that there is no surplus and that heavy expenditures will mean either an increase in taxation or an actual deficit to be covered by the issuing of additional government obligations. A fiscal policy demands that tax rates be so reduced that there are no unnecessary amounts collected by the Government, the taxpayers being consistently allowed to absorb potential surpluses."

Thus the issue appears joined between two radically different policies. Business interests would wipe out the Treasury surplus and reduce revenues, and rely on that to check any congressional or administrative extravagances.

DAILY HINTS FOR HEALTH

HEART DISEASE PREVENTION MATTER OF EDUCATION

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, The Health Magazine

The problem of preventing heart disease among the public seems to be more and more a question of education.

In most instances involvement of the heart takes place insidiously in childhood and the persons do not have proper treatment until the condition has developed so far that any treatment is unavailing.

In [illegible] schools nowadays children are [illegible] regularly and are not permitted to indulge in severe exercise [illegible] the hearts are found to be infected.

Moreover, the presence of infected tonsils, teeth or adenoids, which may be associated with the development of heart [illegible], should be determined early and these infected conditions controlled by removal of the infected parts. Whenever a decayed tooth or the root of a tooth is associated in the mouth of a child with an abscess of the gums, the tooth should be pulled.

The symptoms, formerly passed off as "growing pains," are now believed to be, in most instances, rheumatic infections resulting from infections elsewhere in the body.

One of the most common causes of heart disease as pointed out by Dr. A. Lavinson, is the attempt to take up active life too soon after passing through measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, or any other infectious disease. Rest in bed during and following infectious diseases is important in order that the tissues of the heart, which have been under a severe strain and which are perhaps degenerated because of the action of the poisons associated with the bacteria, may have opportunity to recuperate. Rest in bed means absolute rest.

The child with a defective heart should not be permitted to run about and certainly if it has fever should not even be permitted to attend to its own toilet and hygiene.

A NEW YORKER IN PARIS

By Gilbert Swan

Paris—After a few weeks of Paris you get accustomed to starting up stairs to your office only to find yourself in a concierge's bedroom.

After a few weeks you get used to walking into any office building only to find yourself intruding upon the gray-haired concierge's lunch hour.

After a few weeks you get used to anything.

You miss your modern washroom. You miss your heat. You openly cuss the telephones and you roar with laughter the first time you ride in one of those one-man elevators that invariably trap you between floors. You smile when you see advertisements telling you of places in the country that actually have electric lights.

You utter maledictions when you find the stores are closed on Mondays while the buildings are cleaned, thus leaving you utterly helpless if you care to shop.

You come, presumably, to "gay Paree" and you find one of the smallest towns— in spirit, rather than in population—that you have ever lived in. All those qualities of suburban life you have ever heard about are now just around the corner from you.

Perhaps it is true that the girls of Montmartre are the nudest. Perhaps it is true that you can't walk around in certain centers without being accosted by a lady of the oldest profession. Perhaps the moral standard is upside down as compared to ours. It may be this is a wicked city.

But two blocks from any point whereupon you may find yourself is a cross-section of small town life. Market places are at every corner and women are out in aprons, with baskets over their arms; girls on bicycles are carrying home the evening's groceries; you see family groups gathered at the bars over their coffee and cognac; you see men and women sitting on curbstones with a quart bottle of wine between them, chewing at crusts of bread and drinking directly from the same bottle; you see little boys in aprons that would cause them to be branded as "sissies" from Maine to California.

In a word, you see small town life transplanted to the city and overwhelming its naughtiness.

* * *

And, coming from a prohibition country, you get a large kick out of watching the wine stores at mealtime. Here, spread ofttimes for a solid block are bargain counters in the streets, piled with various 'specials" in vin ordinaire and liqueurs. Here the housewives thresh through the bargains in bottles even at at the basement sales in Grand Rapids, Sioux City or New York. Inside the good people are laying in their wine stores for weeks ahead. As you come to the champagne tables someone tells you of the great champagne cellars of Rheims and the wine cellars of Bordeaux.

Someone tells you of a place where there are 65,000,000 quarts of champagne stores and the underground storehouses are like Manhatton subways. When you tell natives that you come from the land that knows no wine they look at you with unbelieving eyes. They have heard of this, of course, but they do not for a moment believe it. They think it is some kind of a joke. And you reply that, as things are, it is a joke.

* * *

The sheer simplicity and honesty of all these people begins to take effect. You forget the "hold-up" joints of the Montmartre and the shopkeepers who take you for a "boob tourist." You forget the cafe that boosts its prices when an American enters—and all those other unpleasant experiences —and find the place growing on you.

It isn't of course, the Paris you expected. But it's a swell place.

Information on almost any subject can be secured by sending questions to the Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Fredric J. Haskin, director, Washington, D. C. The bureau does not answer questions pertaining to medicine nor does it express opinions on the merits of stocks and bonds. Q. What is the bridge being built in Washington across the Potomac between Potomac Park and Arlington called? S. R. S.

A. At the present time the new bridge comes under the Arlington Memorial Bridge commission, and is known as the Arlington Memorial Bridge.

Q. What was the Kansas-Nebraska Bill? D. V.

A. The Kansas-Nebraska Bill was an act passed by Congress in 1854, which provided for the organization of the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska. It introduced the principle of "squatter sovereignty," or local option on the slavary question, for the people of the Territories, thus abrogating the Missouri Compromise of 1820. It disrupted finally the Whig Party, led to the rise of the Republican Party, and was an important link in the chain of events leading to the Civil War.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER X

Markham's manner was preoccupied, and during the rest of the lunch we spoke but little.

As we sat in the club's loungeroom later having our smoke, Major Benson, who had been standing dejectedly at a window close by, caught sight of Markham and came over to us. He was a full-faced man of about 50, with grave kindly features and a sturdy, erect body.

He greeted Vance and me with a casual bow, and turned at once to the district attorney.

"Markham, I've been thinking things over constantly since our lunch yesterday,' he said, "and there's one other sugestion I think I might make. There's a man named Leander Pfyfe who was very close to Alvin; and it's possible he could give you some helpful information., His name didn't occur to me yesterday, for he doesn't live in the city: he's on Long Island somewhere — Port Washington, I think.—It's just an idea. The truth is, I can't sem to figure sense in this terrible affair."

He drew a quick, resolute breath, as if to check some involuntary sign of emotion. It was evident that the man for all his habitual passivity of nature was deeply moved.

"That's a godd suggestion, Major," Markham said, making a notation on the back of a letter. "I'll get after it immediately."

Vance, who, during this brief interchange, had been gazing unconcernedly out of the window, turned and addressed himself to the major.

"How about Colonel Ostrander? I've seen him several times in the company of your brother."

Major Benson made a slight gesture of deprecation.

"Only in acquaintance. He'd be of no value."

Then he turned to Markham.

"I don't imagine it's time even to hope that you've run across anything."

Markham took his cigar from his mouth, and turning it about in his fingers, contemplated it thoughtfully.

"I wouldn't say that," he remarked, after a moment. "I've managed to find out whom your brother dined with Thursday night; and I know that this person returned home with him shortly after midnight." He paused as if deliberating the wisdom of saying more.

Then: "The fact is, I don't need a great deal more evidence than I've got already to go before the grand jury and ask for an indictment."

A look of surprised admiration flashed in the major's sombre face.

"Thank God for that, Markham," he said. Then, setting his heavy jaw, he placed his hand on the district attorney's shoulder. "Go the limit—for my sake!" he urged. "If you want me for anything, I'll be here at the club till late."

With this he turned and walked from the room.

"It seems a bit cold-blooded to bother the major with questions so soon after his brother's death," commented Markham. "Still, the world has got to go on."

"Why—in heaven's name?" he murmured listlessly.

(Saturday, June 15; 2 p. m.)

We sat for a while smoking in silence. Vance gazing lazily out into Madison Square, Markham frowning deeply at the faded oil portrait of old Peter Stuyvesant that hung over the fireplace.

Presently Vance turned and contemplated the district attorney with a faintly sardonic smile.

"I say, Markham," he drawled: "it has always been a source of amazement to me how easily you investigators of crime are misled by what you call clues. You find a footprint, or a parked automobile, or a monogrammed handkerchief, and then dash off on a wild chase. 'Pon my word, it's as if you chaps were all under the spell of shillin' shockers. Won't you ever learn that crimes can't be solved by deductions based merely on material clues and circumst'ntial evidence?"

I think Markham was as much surprised as I at this sudden criticism; yet we both knew Vance well enough to realize that, despite his placid and almost flippant tone, there was a serious purpose behind his words.

"Would you advocate ignoring all the tangible evidence of a crime?" asked Markham, a bit patronizingly.

"Most emphatically," Vance declared calmly. "It's not only worthless but dangerous. . . . The great trouble with you chaps, d' ye see, is that you approach every crime with a fixed and unshakable assumption that the criminal is either half-witted or a colossal bungler.

"I say, has it never by any chance occurred to you that if a detective could see a clue, the criminal would also have seen it, and would either have concealed it or disguised it, if he had not wanted it found? And have you never paused to consider that anyone clever enough to plan and execute a successful crime these days, is, ipso facto, clever enough to manufacture whatever clues suit his purpose?

"Your detective seems wholly unwilling to admit that the surface appearance of a crime may be delib'rately deceptive, or that the clues may have been planted for the def'nite purpose of misleading him."

"I'm afraid," Markham pointed out, with an air of indulgent irony, "that we'd convict very few criminals if we were to ignore all indicatory evidence, cogent circumstances and irresistible inferences. . . . As a rule, you know, crimes are not witnessed by outsiders."

"That's your fundamental error, don't y' know," Vance observed impassively. "Every crime is witnessed by outsiders, just as is every work of art. The fact that no one sees the criminal, or the artist, actu'lly at work, is wholly incons'quential. The modern investigator of crime would doubless refuse to believe that Rubens painted the Descent from the Cross in the cathedral at Antwerp if there was sufficient circumstant'ntial evidence to indicate that he had been away on diplomatic business, for instance, at the time it was painted. And yet, my dear fellow, such a conclusion would be prepost'rous. Even if the inf'rences to the contr'ry were so irresistible as to be legally overpowering, the picture itself would prove conclusively that Rubens did paint it. Why? For the simple reason d' ye see, that no one but Rubens could have painted it. It bears the indelible imprint of his personality and genius—and his alone."

"I'm not an aethetician," Markham reminded him, a trifle testily. "I'm merely a practical lawyer, and when it comes to determining the authorship of a crime, I prefer tangible evidence to metaphysical hypotheses."

"Your pref'rence, my dear fellow," Vance returned blandly, "will inev'tably involve you in all manner of embarrassing errors."

He slowly lit another cigaret, and blew a wreath of smoke toward the ceiling.

"Consider, for example, your conclusions in the present murder case," he went on, in his emotionless drawl. "You are laboring under the grave misconception that you know the person who prob'bly killed the unspeakable Benson. You admitted as much to the major: and you told him you had nearly enough evidence to ask for an indictment.

"No doubt, you do possess a number of what the learned solons of today regard as convincing clues. But the truth is, don't y' know, you haven't your eye on the guilty person at all. You're about to bedevil some poor girl who had nothing whatever to do with the crime."

Markham swung about sharply.

"So!" he retorted. "I'm about to bedevil an innocent person, eh? Since my assistants and I are the only ones who happen to know what evidence we hold against her, perhaps you will explain by what occult process you acquired your knowledge of this person's innocence."

COACHMAKERS TURN TO AUTOMOBILE TRAVEL

London—(AP)—Since the days of sedan chairs and lumbering family coaches, members of the Coachmakers' company have gone to formal functions in the height of vehicular fashion.

But when the company celebrated its 250th anniversary this year as a royal chartered concern, the guests arrived in limousines, and there was not a horse-drawn vehicle in the turnout.

London streets were famous in the early half of the nineteenth century for their variety of carriages, which came in as many fashions as motor cars today.

There was the travelling chariot, with its large C-spring hung body and its seat behind for servants, used by the wealthy, when travelling abroad. The landaulet, of lighter character, accomodated but two persons, with a high box seat in front of them and a movable hood. King William IV and Queen Victoria used ordinarily a brougham drawn by four horses which positillions rode.

Hip-Line Yoke Found On Newest Dresses For Afternoon And Evening; Belt-Line And Hemline Very Important

BY HENRI BENDEL

NEW YORK—Now that the flowing silhouette has established its supremacy over the flat, uninteresting, straight and slim, the style emphasis shifts.

Three points of chic determine just how superior a gown is, nowadays—the belt-line, the hemline and the manner of achieving fullness.

The latter two I have treated before. Today the waistline interests me most. And of course I mean the low waistline or hip-line really.

There are smart belted gowns and smart bouffant gowns. But the slinky alluringly feminine gown is the one that has the swathed hip-line of Oriental sinuousness, whether it gets it by genuine yokes or by yoke effects or by tight girdles.

Whether Milady shops teas dinners or dances—she is apt to wear a gown with a smart hip-loke. Suits are introducing them, daytime dresses elaborate them and evening gowns glorify them.

TWO YOKES INSTEAD OF ONE!

I show today a little suit that makes doubly sure of its yoke. The material is one of the soft novelty homespuns in browns that express nature itself with one dash of deep woodland green. The blouse, with its unusual neckline that forms a flat jabot, is of silk, in the woodland green.

The skirt has a fitted yofle that dips to points on each hip. To further emphasize this yoke, the deep box pleats in front are stitched down for four inches, in line with the yoke. The back is plain from the yoke down.

The jacket of this suit is bolero with its edges dipping to points, too and it is fastened in front with tricky little buckles. The tendency to use boleros with hip yokes is very new and is important because they bring the hip yokes into prominence as hip length coats never could.

The evening gown of shell pink satin which I show today achieves its hip yoke effect by a broad, shaped girdle which snugly outlines the figure and, tying in a chic knot in the front and dips to a deep U in the rear the front flare. This front fullness is gathered up under the hem, in the "harem style" that corresponds to the swathed hipline.

This gown slenderizes the figure with its svelte lines and its semi-circular front width which allows freedom of movement but retains the somewhat straight silhouette. The decolletage is just nicely rounded in front and dips to a deep U in the rear.

SPARKLING BRILLIANTS GIVE A YOKE-EFFECT

Gorgeously rich and graceful is the third gown today which merely simulates the hip-loke as a gesture to fashion. Nile green and silver brocade fashions this gown royally, with rippling strands of brilliants flowing from the center big buckle of brilliants.

Five such strands of brilliants outline a tight hip-line while as many more fall from the center front to simulate drapes. The uneven, flared hem-line furthers the illusion of much fullness in this charming gown.

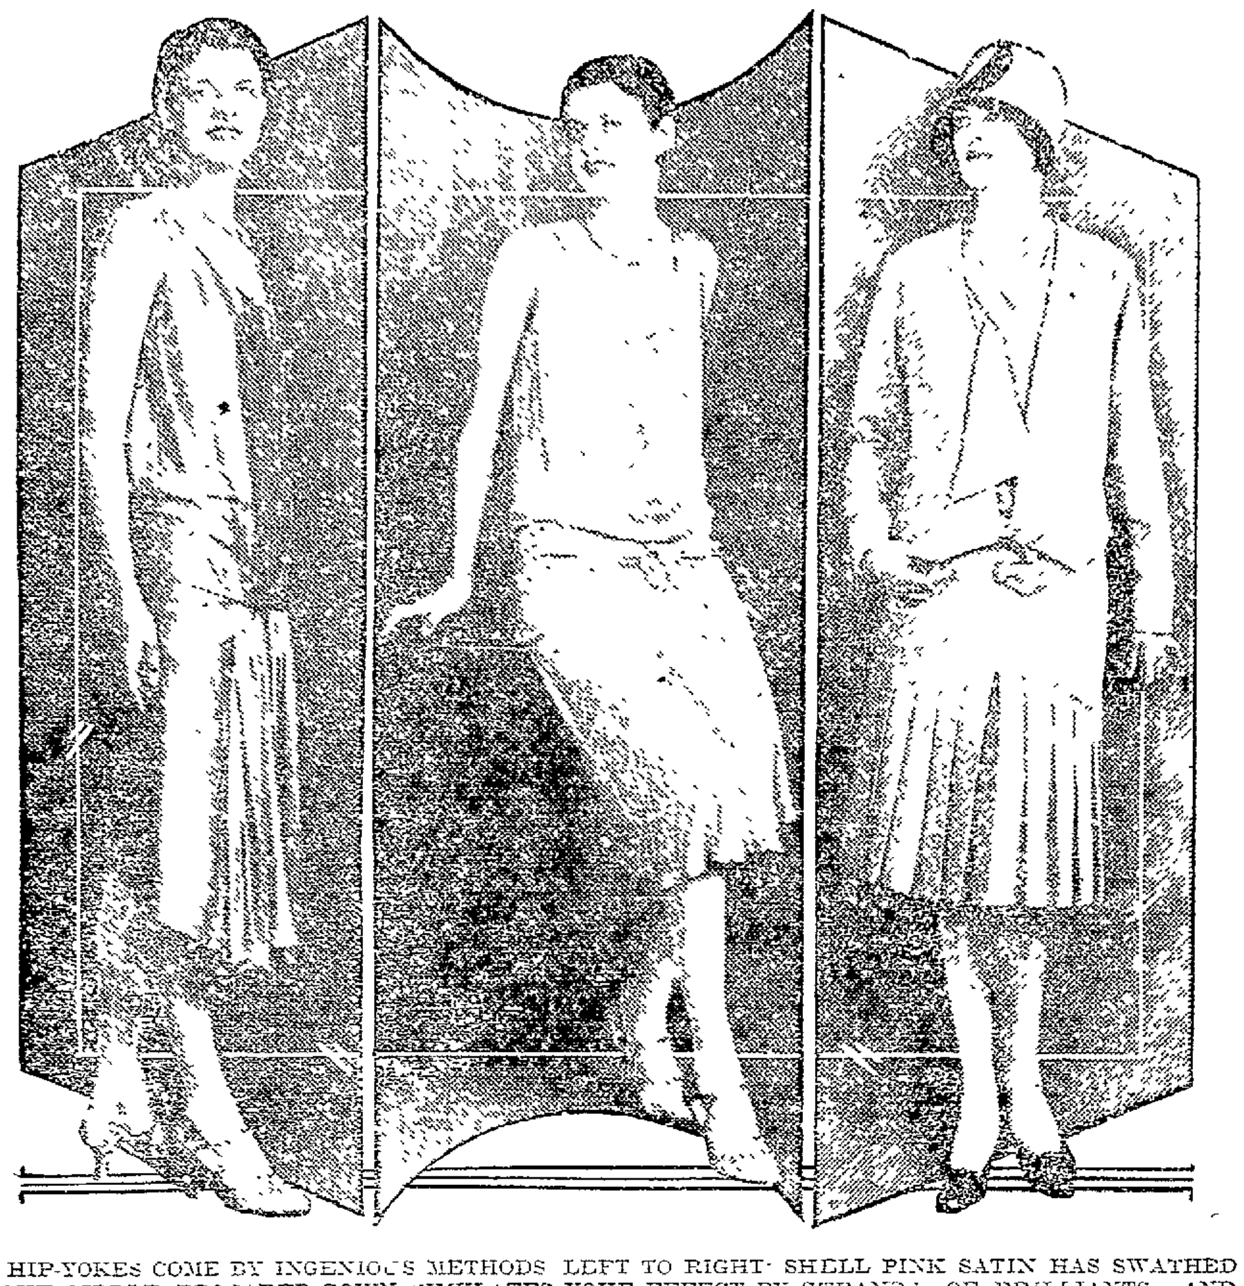

Both the front and the rear of the neck are modestly decollette.

All three of these frocks are fashioned for the woman of slender or medium proportions. But just because a woman has ample lines she need feel no compunction about wanting a yoke dress. Sometimes a fitted yoke with a flared lower portion of the skirt will give an attractive dignity and grace to a stout figure.

BUT YOKES MUST BE COMPLIMENTARY

But the lokes that cut the figure in two, by having materials run crosswise instead of up and down, those that are of contrasting materials or those that are emphasized by gleaming gems and bizarre traceries should all be avoided.

Chic comes by hip-lines it is true. But they must be complimentary lines or they fail to achieve their purpose.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

ACROSS the land the whole band went. To build a fire was their intent. They traveled 'bout a mile or so and then came to the beach. Said Scouty, "If we want a dish of sea food, we must catch some fish." Just then they saw a seagull o'er, and very loudly screech.

"Ah, ha, there is fish in that stream, or what would make that seagull scream?" said Coppy as he pulled a string of fish line into view. "I'll put a pin upon this line and catch some fish. That will be fine. As long as we are hungry, it's the best thing we can do."

"While I do this, the rest can try to build our little bonfire high." Then Coppy walked down to the shore and threw his fishline out. It took the bunch a little while to put the sticks up in a pile. Then Clowny said, "To light our fire we'll need a match, no doubt."

"Oh no!" they heard wee Scouty yell. "Two stones will answer just as well. I'll show you how to start a blaze. It's easy as can be!" He found some stones and took his pick and rubbed just two together quick. And sure enough, a little flame the Tinymites could see.

And thus the bonfire flared up high until it fairly lit the sky. "Gee, that is great," said Carpy, as he stepped back from the heat. Then, up came Coppy, full of cheer. "A big surprise!" [illegible] "Look here!" The Tinies saw a string of fish that surely looked a treat.

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

If marriage as an institution had to exist, if sweethearts, ardently in love, had to be converted into that queer race known as husbands and wives, then she would much prefer, if given a choice in some other incarnation, to be the husband, Faith reflected as she sat, nervous and tense, beside Bob in an excellent orchestra seat of the Columbia theatre. Somehow it was degrading to be a wife so much in love with a husband that his smile or his frown meant heaven or hell to her. It was not fair for one human being's happiness to be so bound up in another person. If God or biology decreed that every human being must be essentially alone, never really seeing the soul of another, never really getting inside of another person's heart or mind, then why, in the name of mercy, did not that same force, whatever it was, also make each human being self-sufficient?

She tortured herself with these futile questions as a peroxided heroine warbled shrilly, with a Brooklyn accent, of eternal love for the pudgy tenor, who reiterated his vows endlessly in a saccharine phrase. "I love you, Sweet, o-o-only YOU-HOO OO!"

So she had said and meant it. She would always love only Bob. And so Bob had said, in a voice far more thrilling than that pudgy tenor's. But had he meant it? Did aman ever meant it, and go on and on meaning it?

And all the time, as her poor, harried mind milled these questions, Faith's brown eyes were fixed prayerfully upon Bob's face. In the semi-dark of the theater he seemed not to notice, seemed intent only upon the silly, musical comedy. If they were not married he would notice, would tease her about not being able to see the stage because she could not tear her eyes from his beloved face. He would reach for her hand, cuddle it warmly in his, stroke her wrist with tingling fingers, lean forward every few minutes to whisper a comment or a compliment or a love-word. But now—He stared at the stage moodily, making no effort to pretend enjoyment. He was a husband, out with his wife. Husbands do not have to pretend to be amused when they are not—

During intermissions he excused himself abruptly to smoke cigarets in the lobby. She awaited his return tensely, her tear-filled eyes fixed unseeingly on the program booklet, every nerve straining toward him, needing him, fearing his return. In the third act he laughed aloud twice at some antic of the comedian, a "gentleman drunk," and she was so grateful to the comedian for having made her husband laugh out naturally, spontaneously, that she yearned for flowers to toss upon the stage.

When the show was over, Faith felt personally responsible for its tawdriness, its failure to win Bob out of his black mood. She trotted along beside him to the side street where the car was parked, desperately trying to make conversation.

"I thought the comedian was rather good, didn't you, dear? Did you ever see such long limber legs?" And, "Did you notice that woman in front of us? I thought she'd go into hysterics." And, "For the longest time I couldn't tell whether that person two rows ahead of us was a boy or a girl. Did you ever see such a mannish-looking girl? I don't like these mannish haircuts, do you, darling?"

And as she rattled on nervously, unable to control the impulse to tack that fatal question on the end of each sentence. She hated herself for being so miserable, for caring so much whether he was nice to her or not. But all the time she loved him so frantically that she felt that her heart was crying itself to death in her breast.

NEXT: Aunt Hattie gives Faith "a piece of her mind."

WHICH SHOULD BE CHILD'S IDEAL?

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

A BOY of ten stands as close as he can get to the radio, listening to each round of a prize fight.

Above him on the wall hangs a picture of Lincoln—the man who put up probably the greatest moral fight in all history.

Should we blame the boy or his parents that he is interested to white heat over a prize fight and has completely forgotten the existence of the other.

The Saturday that clinched the World Series for the Yankees we motored probably fifty miles. And in every village and city over the entire route there stood a crowd of men, women and boys watching the score.

Is young America of the future going to be a puglistic, home-run hitting fan? Is that going to be the result of radios, instantaneous press services, and other devices? Or is he going to be the studious analytical child who has a true idea of heroes and worthwhile people?

To tell the truth I was pretty well grown before it dawned on me that Lincoln was a great man. I recited in school like a parrot of all the great things he had done. We had pictures all over the house.

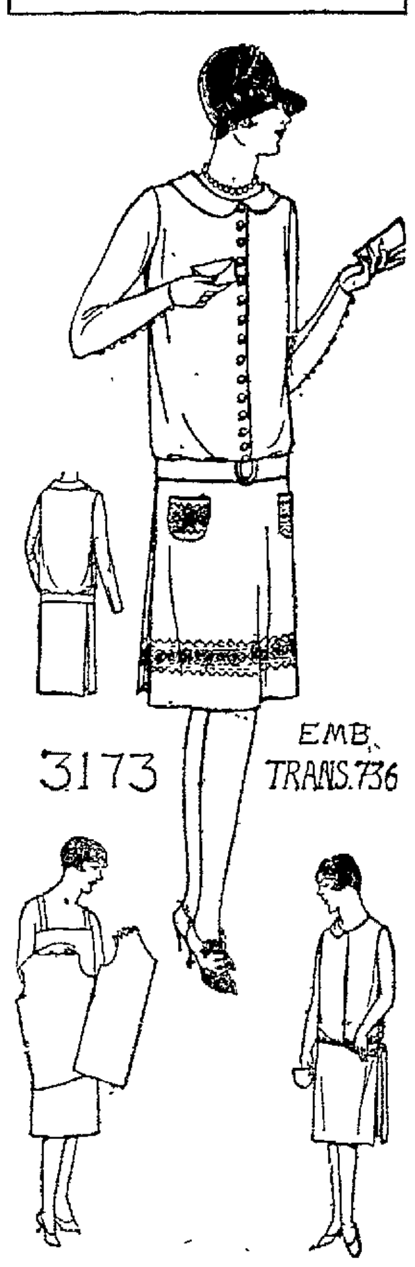

But one cannot be told of another's greatness. He has to live through trouble, to arrive at man's or woman's estate before he is capable of understanding what others have endured. It is only the middle aged who can gaze into the sad stone face in Washington and understand the half of what is written there. It means nothing to the young. But there is one thing we might do. Along with the boy's education in the Olympic arts, we might get him interested in a living statesman. Let him follow up his career and work up a certain enthusiasm over him. And take him to Washington to the House and Senate if it is humanly possible. Let him know our statesman by name. Or take him to your own state's capitol and make political economy, real to him.

Following the arrest of a man and woman as pickpocket suspects the Paris police were compelled recently to hold them until their description and finger prints were sent thousands of miles to the police of Australia, who recognized the two confirmed criminals.

Women golfers of France, are wearing leather pigskin wrist-straps to which are fastened small score cards and silver pencils.

For throwing a kitten at his landlady, Francis Higgins was sentenced to three months' imprisonment in Glasgow prison recently.

MANNEQUINS IN PARIS PRACTICE BENDING SELVES

Paris —(AP)— Even the styles in mannequins change. Having reduced the girls who wear the models in the dressmaking houses to the point where they can reduce them no more the fashion dictators are now trying bending them into new shapes. Each fashionable silhouette requires a certain pose to show it off to best advantage. Last season the girls carried themselves in a convex line to diminish their hips. This season they curve the other way for the new silhouette.

For the tired and absent minded mannequins who are convex when they should be concave there are all-seeing head saleswomen to remind them of their pose by a suggestive patting of the stomach or vice versa.

Aid Society Of Church Gives Play

The Ladies Ad society of Memorial Presbyterian church will sponsor a play, "The Old Peabody Pew," a dramatization of the book by Kate Douglas Wiggins on the Friday before Thanksgiving at the church. Rehearsals are being held every Wednesday night.

The play is a story of an old fashioned country church in New England. The theme has to do with the love story which has developed in the village in which Justin Peabody, a decendent of the oldest settlers in the village, plays a leading part. The play commences with a meeting of the Dorcas society of the church, which is composed of women, trying to improve the church. The characters will be in dress in costumes of the '80's.

Eight women and one man make up the cast. The "carpet" committee of the Dorcas society consists of "Mrs. Burbank," Mrs. F. F. Martin; "Nancy Wentworth," the heroine, Mrs. John Pughe; "Mrs. Baxter," Mrs. G. E. Pelton; "Mrs. Miller," the minster's wife, Mrs. Reid; "Mrs. Sargent," Mrs. Leslie Smith; "Widow Uzzell," Mrs. Edward Mielke; "Lobelia Brewster," Mrs. Harold Heller and "Maria Sharp," Mrs. Edward Chandler and Justin Peabody, Harold Heller.

NEW MEDICAL SCHOOL OPENING ON OCT. 31

University of Chicago Will Have Finest Center of Kind in Country

Chicago—(AP)—A group of great buildings, rising in the beauty of modern Gothic, will be dedicated on the University of Chicago campus Oct. 31, marking the formal opening of one of the greatest medical centers in the world and the inauguration of a new theory in medical education.

The buildings soon to be opened represent an investment of $20,000,000. The structures cost $7,000,000 to erect and the remainder is in endowment.

Facing the famous Midway is the facade of the principal building, catching the light with its softtoned stone, while behind it and linked to it stretch other buildings.

In medical education at the university, the principle of Paracelsus, doctor and chemist of the 16th century has been adopted. The ancient physician said "illustrious doctors might be graduated from books, but books made not a single physician."

So the buildings have been designed so that wards and laboratories and the various departments are physically united. The physician will follow a case from bedside to laboratory. At his command, and at the command of the student, will be resources of all the basic sciences and the facilities of the scientific departments of the university.

Such correlation exists in no medical school in the country, say officials of the univeristy.

When all departments of the medical school are functioning, 400 carefully selected students will be in training, taught by a faculty of 100.

STAGE And SCREEN

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH

Convincing proof that a great motion picture need not necessarily be an epic in number of people used or the size of sets, is to be shown at Fischer's Appleton Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is Emil Jannings' first Paramount starring vehicle "The Way of All Flesh."

Here is the foremost motion picture actor of the world today in one of the most dramatically human, vital and gripping pictures the screen has ever shown.

"The Way of All Flesh" is a saga of sacrifice, the coming of temptation in the life of a simple, home-loving man, a powerful sermon on the frailty of mankind. To see "The Way of All Flesh" with Jannings as the man who slew himself in the eyes of the world that his family might be spared shame, is to experience a flood of cleansing, thought provoking emotions. There are laughs and tears, moments when the character seems to fairly speak aloud.

By no means is Jannings alone in this drama. Belle Bennett, Phyllis Haver, Donald Keith, Fred Kohler and many others in the supporting cast give visual evidence that Paramount searched long and assiduously for those capable of giving that rarest of all rarities, a perfect characterization in the varied and exacting roles of a modern motion picture.

Victor Fleming, who directed, uses the camera as an accomplished spinner of stories uses words. At times his handling of the plot flashes with genius. Always it is true and convincing.

"The Way of All Flesh" will undoubtedly be classed as one of the foremost pictures ever filmed, and this reputation should endure for years to come.

THE BOOK PAGE

I Know A Secret

By Christopher Morley

REVIEW BY ELEANOR WING

The most delightful books in the world are those that grownups steal from children. There are only a few—Just So Stories, Alice In Wonderland, Peter Pan, When We Were Very Young and maybe two or three others. I Know A Secret by Christopher Morley is added to this ageless list—the book that many a reviewer has hoped that Morley would write. Doubleday Page and company have just published this children-grown-up's book, and Jeanette Warmuth, a very clever young illustrator, has decorated the edition.

Mr. Morley has used the names and personalities of his children as the cast about whom the animal drama is played. He has used his own home for the stage, so the penetrative reader can easily imagine for himself the happy, laughing home in which the book was written. From that standpoint, all adults ought to like and appreciate the story which was, of course, primarily written for children. And I suspect that when Christopher Morley's biography is written that I Know A Secret will furnish valuable information, color and charm for his biographer.

About the book itself. It is a series of half stories and half sketches of the animals which the Morley children have found pets. The wise and strict Fourchette, the cat mother of Malta and Hops; the grave Escargot, who ran away from France because Frenchmen eat snails; the lawyer Mr. Lincoln Blackbird; and Mr. Gissing, who was a puppy when the story was written. There are many others, but these are the principle characters on the stage, and they have such definite personalities that they easily outshine the squirrels, thrushes and mice who scamper across the scenes.

One suspects Mr. Morley of having a lovely time all of the weeks during which he was writing. He admits that he is the Mr Mistletoe, writer, who watches the children and animals playing noisily outside his study window He says, too, that he was very glad when Escargot, the little French snail, was taken ill and the need for a hospital arose, because during that time, the garden and house were kept blissfully quiet on Escargot's account Each story was tried out on the children as it was finished, and the hilarity each one caused kept bedtime off many a night.

This book review is gradually taking the form of a personal interview. But perhaps there is adequate excuse for it. So few children's books on the market now stand alone in the eyes of the public that perhaps it is wise to treat this very exceptional I Know A Secret differently from any of the others. There is a lovely little trend of philosophy running through the book which will make many a grown up chuckle and many a child say "Why, that's true." The episode of poor little puppy Gissing who had never been told what Christmas was, and who didn't know when it arrived "You know how it is: when everyone else seems to know about something that you yourself don't understand, you don't like to admit your ignorance."

The illustrations are excellent. Miss Warmuth took the Brooklyn scholarship for a year's study in Paris, and since her return has been designing the book covers for Doubleday Page and Company I Know A Secret is her first big job, and she has succeeded very well. Her work is a little on the New Yorker type—ungainly, amusing sketches which suit the theme of Mr. Morley's book. Two of the masterpieces were Mr. Morley's own work, and it has been whispered that he was far prouder of his picture of Mr. Santa Claus, and of his map of Long Island, which looked just like a fish, than he was of the balance of the book.

Perhaps that is true But if his readers have half of the fun reading I Know A Secret, as he had in writing it, it will pay everyone of them to start right in reading.

Purple Shows Little To Be Feared Outside Fast Star, But It's Enough

Oshkosh Plays Below Usual Form While Herber Does Everything for Bays

Showing little outside of just one player, "Herby" Herber, all-Valley conference quarterback, West Green Bay high school's contenders for the 1927 Valley title kept their slate clean Friday afternoon at Oshkosh, burying the Oshkosh eleven under a 40-0 score. As has been said, West Appleton's opponent at Bay next Saturday, showed little but Herber but that was plenty to beat Oshkosh twice The game was played on Friday as Oshkosh Normal was to play its homecoming game against Milwaukee Saturday afternoon

ALL IS HERBER

Herber is twice as good a player as last year, one to be feared by Appleton, and after watching him run his squad it is easy to see why West is unbeaten this year. As last year he shoots bullet-like spiral passes from 25 to 45 yards to his backs but unlike last year, he is much improved in his broken field running. In this department he now picks his holes like a Big Ten star and his ability in a broken field is almost uncanny, a great improvement over last year.

West marched to a marker early in the game aided by one of Herber's long passes and a few minutes later Herber took a punt and raced through the entire Oshkosh team for 80 yards and a marker The score was 18-0 at the quarter and from then on the Bays took things easy. Herber even making fair catches of punts with no man nearer that 20 yards from him Oshkosh showed a good end running attack but only one man worked well, Tadych

Tadych, with a little assistance would have run rings around the Bay ends which Appleton may well remember for next week, but he went it all alone He circled the Purple ends for gains of from 10 to 40 yards and was the only consistent ground gainer on the squad West presented a strong line, in spite of the loss of its star center, but Oshkosh was dead on its feet and failed to charge fast or the Bay line might not have looked so good.

Beside Herber, Borchers and Adams played fine ball for the winners and Schneider worked well in the Oshkosh line. Oshkosh played ragged ball and looked as if it might have held West much closer playing up to standard. Oshkosh got one marker when a pass bounded off two Baymens' chests and into Oshkosh hands on the five-yard line, but it was called back and the Sawdusters were penalized for holding Witte of Appleton handled the game well

EAST PRESENTS CARD OF STAR GRID GAMES

New York—(AP)—Stellar football attractions in the east a few of them bearing on mythical championships and others involving rivals of years standing Saturday were magnets for approximately half a million persons.

The Yale-Darthmouth contest was the leading contest so far as football itself was concerned The best Darthmouth has been able to get against Yale on the football field is one tie score.

Harvard having lost to Purdue hoped to fare better in its clash with Indiana.

Penn. defeated in its last two starts meets in the Navy a team that has lost but one game.

Army looked for a stiff fight from Bucknell, the team that humbled Pennsylvania State, 13-7, and tied the unbeaten Geneva college eleven.

Princeton was unperturbed about William and Mary.

Cornell entertained a heavy Columbia team and experts were at sea regarding a choice

New York university hoped to maintain its clean slate against Colgate. Boston college essayed to beat its former Coach, Major Frank W Cavenaugh, now at Fordham.

CAGING IS POPULAR SPORT IN INDIANA

Evansville, Ind.—Basketball is five times more popular in this city than football, judging from the number of candidates seeking berths on those teams at Central High school.

When football practice was ordered, a squad of fifty candidates responded.

When basketball practice started, 250 youngsters turned out. Of this number, 220 were freshmen and sophomores.

The entire student body is composed of only 700 boys.

Was Long Run

Gardner, Montana State back, who has made runs up to 91 yards in length this season, is the team's outstanding ground gainer.

HENDRICKS FIGHTS DRAW IN OSHKUSH

Three Knockouts in Four Bouts Furnish Fans With Thrills

Walter "Washie" Hendricks, Appleton boxer, played a prominent part in furnishing fans of the Fox River Valley with one of the best mit entertainments ever witnessed in these parts. Friday night, at Oshkosh. A large crowd attended the card of the Oshkosh American legion and it was a sizzler from start to finish, including three knockouts in four scraps, the best card the valley has seen in some time, according to Appleton witnesses

Hendricks, fighting the second bout on the card, battled to a rip-roarin' two-fisted draw with Bobby Lyons of St Paul, said to be one of the cleverest men ever seen in Oshkosh. The battle was a slugfest from start to finish with neither man running away. Washie weighed 156½ pounds and Lyons 154.

In the opener Young Beall of Oshkosh, knocked out Stanley Mitchell, Neenah, in the fifth round of another "blood and thunder" battle Mitchell knocked Beall down twice in the first round but the Oshkosh boy laid him low with husky swats in the fifth. Beall weighed 139 and Mitchell 142.

Joey Thomas of Oshkosh, showed a reversal of his form of a week ago when he fought Phil Zwick here, and also showed a punch, knocking out Billy LaMont, Superior, former Appleton and Valley favorite in the seventh. Joey started after Billy hard right from the gong, probably still feeling last week's defeat and he had the Superior boy out on his feet several times, but Billy showed his usual gameness He was subbing for Tiger Jack With. Billy weighed 124½ and Joey 124.

In the big bout Mike Mandell of St. Paul ended the show early, stopping Art Pertille, Hurley in a minute and 52 seconds. As the pair squared off Mandell shot in a lucky punch which caught Art just right, dazing him, and after that he was an easy target for the accurate-hitting St. Paul boy.

THREE NAMES FAMOUS ON GRID BACK AGAIN

In a few years, three names that are outstanding in the football world will again take their places in the lineups of some of our leading universities. No doubt you have heard the name of Yost, Heston and O'Neil before in connection with the gridiron sport.

At Manlius Military School, located at Manlius, N. Y., are enrolled Fielding H. Yost, Jr., son of the famous "Hurry Up" Yost, director of athletics at the University of Michigan; William Heston, Jr., son of the sensational "Willie," who some 20 years back, was thrice named All-American halfback; also Frank O'Neil, Jr., son of the renowned "Buck" O'Neil, who starred at Manlius, later at Williams College and who for years after leaving the college was head coach at Syracuse.

At present Heston is the star of the trio. Last year he captained Northwestern High of Detroit and was named All-State back.

MANAGERS PRAISE BUSH IN KIKI CUYLER CASE

New York—While several National League managers in attendance at the world series disagreed with some of Donie Bush's strategy in trying to win a ball game from the Yankees, not one of them would make adverse comment on his handling of the Cuyler situation

"Ball players are paid to bat in the position the manager desires and are in duty bound to perform where the manager believes they will be of the most use. Two things they must always do, are run out every hit and slide into every base, when by so doing they either increase their chances of being safe or make it more difficult to complete a double play."

That was the sizeup of John McGraw when the Cuyler case was under discussion. Jack Hendricks of Cincinnati, who was present at the same time, tersely remarked:

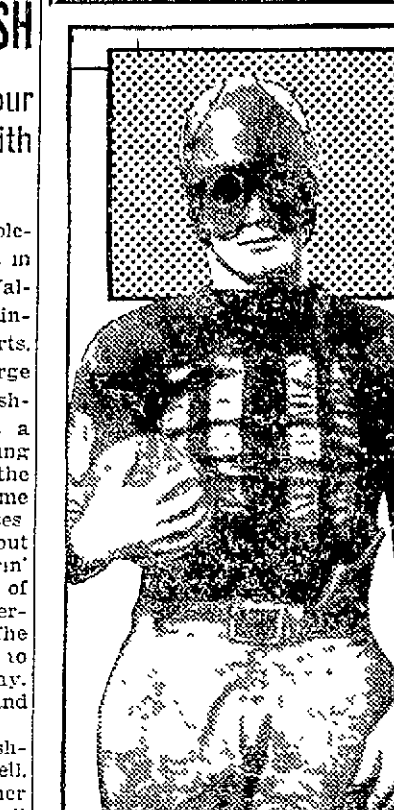

"Any big league manager who doesn't run his ball club to suit himself will shortly be looking for a new job."

National League managers seem to be a unit with Bush in the way he handled a most unpleasant situation.

Michigan football teams carry a real wolverine mascot called "Biff" on all their trips.

SELECTION OF STAR MEN HARD THIS YEAR

Many Backs Loom Up as Contenders for All-American Jobs

New York—(AP)—The race for all-American football honors this year, particularly among the backfield men, is under way with the ballyhoo for various candidates being sounded in all sectors of the college gridiron front.

Before the touchdown harvest is completed, it promises to develop many a warm debate over sectional favorites From a random survey of the field it seems that the number and calibre of ball carriers is the highest it has been since 1925 when the experts staggered through the job of trying to find a backfield "big four" out of a collection that only included such satellites as Red Grange, Ernie Nevers, George Wilson, Eddie Tryon, Benny Friedman, "Peggy" Flournoy, Jack Slagle and "Swede" Oberlander. Another month may shift the prospect but it looms like another difficult assignment in selecting the all American cast from an array that now numbers such stars as Bill Spears of Vanderbilt, Christy Flanagan of Notre Dame; Herb Joesting of Minnesota a 1926 all American; Myles Lane of Dartmouth, Eastern high scorer; Ed Wittmer, Princeton's sophomore ace; Bill Amos of Washington and Jefferson; Morley Drury of Southern California, Glenn Presnell of Nebraska; "Gibby" Welch of Pittsburg; Louis Gilbert of Michigan, Bruce Caldwell of Yale; "Tiny" Lewis of Northwestern; Frank Briante of New York University high scoring machine; and "Stubby" Thomason of Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado

These stars are enjoying the spotlight while most of the linemen heave and push in the obscurity that accompanies mass action but already such forwards as Bennie Oosterbaan, Michigan captain and end; Sprague, giant Army tackle; Langdell, Dartmouth tackle and "Tim" Clark, giant Harvard tackle have been conspicuous.

UNBEATEN TEAMS IN BIG TEN WILL FACE BIG TEST SATURDAY

Illini and Michigan Settle One Place; Gophers, Maroons Play Whipped Teams

Chicago —(AP)— All four of the unbeaten teams of the western conference had their championship hopes at stake at the Big Ten opponents Saturday.

Illinois and Michigans battleground was Champaign. Chicago and Minnesota, the two other teams in the race, had for foes, teams that have tasted defeat. Chicago faces the harassed Buckeyes in the Ohio Stadium while Minnesota entertains Wisconsin in the 38th renewal of their annual battle.

RED SEES GAME

In the home coming crowd of 70,000 at Urbana, Red Grange the hero of Illinois victory over Michigan in 1924, planned to watch his younger brother, Garland, perform against the Wolverines Grange scored four touchdowns against Michigan in 12 minutes on that occasion but the next two years the Illini could not score a single point against Yost's eleven

Illinois is outnumbered in veterans and in individual stars. Louis Gilbert can outkick any of the Illini and Benny Oosterbaan can outpass anybody on Zuppke's squad but the Wolverines have not underrated so wily a foe as Coach Zuppke. Rain mired the field for the Minnesota-Wisconsin conflict but ticket sales indicated a record breaking throng of 58,000 Coach Thistlethwaite shifted his line, in view of the heavy going, to give the Badgers a 10-pound advantage over Minnesota, and some slight hopes of stopping the mighty Joesting's rushes. The Gophers ruled a 2 to 1 favorite although Wisconsin has brought one of the best teams in years

BADGERS SHOW FIGHT

Keyed to a "do or die" battle pitch the Wisconsin football warriors pitched camp in the enemy territory Friday night. Minnesota, basking in the glory of the 38 to 0 drubbing of Iowa, has been installed a big favorite by fandom but close observers of football's vagaries were inclined to temper predictions with Caution out of a high regard for Wisconsin's powerful forward wall.

It was Dad's day at Minnesota.

Both teams finished their final workouts in good shape. Minnesota was in far better condition for the badger game than at any time during the season with its line plunging all-American star captain Herb Joesting, recovered from a foot infection.

In the 36 contests played between Wisconsin and Minnesota since 1890, Minnesota has won 20 and lost 12, while four have been tied.

With several stars on the sidelines, the Buckeyes were ready for Chicago with a brand new lineup.

Northwestern and Missouri, both with an imposing list of crippies, had come back scores to settle Saturday. Each was beaten a week ago.

Beaten and out of the Big Ten race, Indiana has concentrated during the week on the Harvard game Saturday. Iowa had Denver university as visiting enemy and Purdue played Montana state.

In intersectional importance the Notre Dame-Georgia Tech game at South Bend, Saturday ranks with the season's leaders as each squad has been supreme in its section.

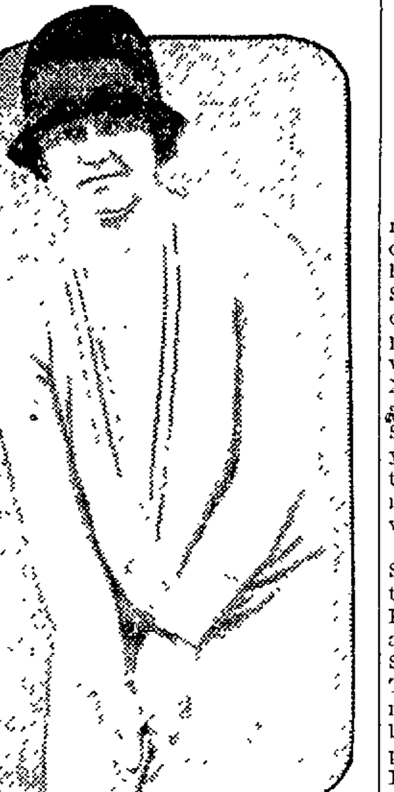

MARQUETTE IS HOST TO GRINNELL SQUAD

Milwaukee —(AP)—Homecoming, the seventh annual will be celebrated in the Marquette University stadium Saturday with the Marquette Golden avalanche due for a comeback as it battles the Grinnell college Pioneers of Grinnell, Iowa, last year's conquerors of the Murray-trained machine.

No title or championship will be at Stake Saturday for both Marquette and Grinnell go into battle with a string of defeats back of them.

Syracuse, N. Y.—(AP)—Red Harring, Utah, defeated Eddie Burnbrook, Baltimore (10).

TWICE CHAMP

MRS KENNETH M. REED

She's the gold champion of Oregon and Washington, this Mrs. Kenneth M. Reed, of Portland, Ore. She first annexed the title in her neighbor state and then the one in her own state. She's 30 years old now and wants to annex the titles of all other states in her section.

POOR BLOCKING IS HURTING OHIO TEAM

Fundamentals of Game Missing, Lose Buckeyes Two Games

BY BILLY EVANS

At the opening of the football season it seemed as if the Ohio State-Princeton game would be one of the choice tidbits of the 1927 football menu.

It may still so prove but Ohio State must play better football than it did against Northwestern and Michigan, What is even more to the point Ohio State is really capable of playing a much better brand

Princeton so far has played up to the fondest hopes of its supporters and is certain to be undefeated when it clashes with the Ohioans, which, at such a time, may be thrice defeated

Chicago is Ohio State's next opponent, while Princeton meets William and Mary. Chicago, after its defeat by Oklahoma in the opening game of the season, has trounced two Big Ten rivals, Indiana and Purdue, and vanquished Pennsylvania.

Ohio State, to cope with Princeton, must improve its play at least 25 per cent. State, on the surface, appears to have great potential strength but so far has failel to make the most of it.

In the Michigan game, the Ohio State line more than held its own, although it struck me that the Michigan ends, Captain Oosterbaan in particular, outplayed their opponents.

It was in the fundamentals of the game that the losers seemed weakest. The tackling was very ordinary, the interference poor and the real need of a good blocking was apparent.

In this connection, I recall a conversation I once heard between a prominent southern coach and a former star who played under him.

"Coach you are going to get a great drop-kicker and a fine open field runner in John Smith, from our high school next fall," said the former star.

"That's fine, but can he block?" was the way the coach dismissed the player under discussion.

That seemed to be Ohio State's greatest trouble in the Michigan game. It had plenty of backs who could run with the ball but nobody to block, and, as a result, none of them ran very far.

No doubt Michigan has produced greater backs than Louis Gilbert, but certainly there never was a better halfback than the Gilbert of Michigan who scored the 21 points for his team against Ohio State.

Gilbert's great punting was a threat that Michigan held over Ohio State throughout the game. He gained yardage in practically every punting duel staged. Nothing is more discouraging to a team than to be constantly out-punted.

In returning punts and carrying the ball through a broken field, Gilbert gave a performance that was on a par with his exceptional punting.

The masterly manner in which he would kick the ball out of bounds after it had traveled 35 or 40 yards, reminded one of Harry Kipke, now a Michigan coach, at his best.

To top off his many threats was the ease with which he received or threw forward passes. He looked every inch All-America timber against Ohio State.

GOLDEN TORNADO BACK AFTER 'BAMA'S LOSS

Atlanta, Ga.— They'll call the Georgia Tech eleven a "Golden Tornado" again this year, after being labelled "Yellow Jackets" for the past three years.

When Tech's eleven is winning consistently, as it did in the days of Strupper, Harlan and Flowers, the team is known as the "Golden Tornado"

When Tech is losing, its team is termed merely "Yellow Jackets" As soon as Alabama was beaten a few days ago, the winning nickname was revived for the Georgia Tech eleven.

Chicago—Jock Malone, St. Paul, outpointed Walcott Langford, Chicago (10).

Pete Bross, Rockford, Ill., knocked out Billy Light, St. Paul, (5).

KROMER'S CHAMPS PLAY AT KIMBERLY

Former Kawman Has All-star Crew to Face Valley Champs Sunday

Kimberly—The baseball season is not yet over as far as Kimberly is concerned; though football teams now have played half their schedules. For Sunday afternoon Kimberly's Fox River Valley League champions, are to play host to Stormy Kromer's Milwaukee-Lake Shore loop titlists from Milwaukee. The K-C lineup has been strengthened by the addition of Les Smith, swat champion of the loop this year and manager of the Kaukauna team, who played with Kimberly early in the season. Les is a former Ottumwa and Detroit Tiger player.

Others who will face the Kromers Sunday are all regular members of the Valley champs including Squaw Pocan, stellar southpaw hurler, who also plays with the Kromers, Cooke, Schell, M. Lamers, T. Lamers, L. Thein, H. Thein and others. The former Kaukauna ball magnate will bring a stellar lineup, all AA class players. His hurlers will be Lefty Eckhardt, who twirled the team to its league title and Slow Motion Joe Eddleman, the Silver Fox, who has been the star of the Milwaukee Brewer staff for the last two years. As a catcher he has Ray Thompson, another Brewer. Jack Kloza, who will move into the American League next year is another of his stars.

MACK MAY GIVE COBB RELEASE NEXT SEASON

Philadelphia—The question as to whether Ty Cobb will return to the Athletics next season was, it seems, indirectly answered recently when Connie Mack handed Zach Wheat his unconditional release.

Last winter, Mack felt the addition of the three veteran stars, Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins and Zach Wheat, would make a pennant winner out of his club. The trio, while doing some excellent work, fell far short of Mack's expectations.

While Collins is sure to return and seems likely to succeed to the managerial togo when Mack steps out, it is better than an even bet that Cobb is through.

It is understood that Cobb received a salary close to $50,000 last year, with an added guarantee as to the exhibition games, to net him something like $15,000.

Cobb isn't that big a gate attraction and he has slowed down so much that his play, while still excellent, is but a shadow of what he could once do. He's hardly worth $65 000 a year.

PILING ON PLAYERS NOW IS PUNISHABLE

BY E. J. O'BRIEN

Heretofore, piling up was called when a player of the defense threw himself on an opponent after the whistle had declared the ball dead.

Now, however, in order to prevent injuries, Rule 21, Section 3, has been revised to read: "There shall be no piling up on a player after the referee has declared the ball dead, or after the player in possession of the ball has been downed and is in the grasp of an opponent."

Now a man can be guilty of "piling up" before the ball has been actually declared dead.

College 1927 Captains

DOUGLAS OF KANSAS AGGIES

Manhattan, Kan.—One of the best blockers in the Missouri Valley conference—that's Jim Douglass, captain and fullback of this year's Kansas Aggies' eleven.

It is Douglass who is clearing the way this season for many brilliant advances of the ball by Halfbacks Holsinger and Springer.

It is Douglass, who when only a few yards are needed throws his huge frame through the opponents' line for those few yards.

It is Douglass who is featuring the work of the Kansas City Aggies by his sterling work on defense against forward passes and other methods of attack used by the opposition.

In other words, it is Douglass, as much as any other man, who is responsible for the showing of the Aggies this year.

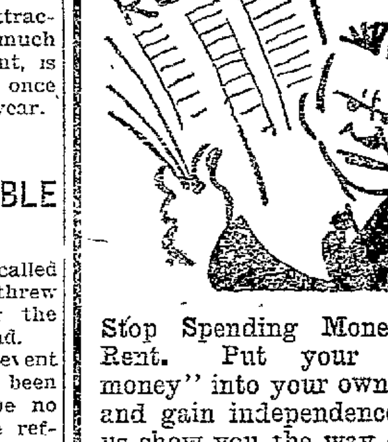

BENTZ KNOCKS OUT SIG ZWICK IN MILWAUKEE GO

Milwaukee —(AP)— Howard Bentz, Milwaukee middleweight, knocked out Sig Zwick, also of Milwaukee, in the seventh round of a ten-round bout here Friday night. Harry Kahn of Milwaukee, lost to Cuddy Demarco, Pittsburg, on a foul in the third round. They are lightweights. Jackie Nichols, Detroit, Junior lightweight, outpointed Billy Bonillas, Taft, Cal., in a six-runder.

Spirit Of Late Captain Leads Baylor Grid Crew

BY BILLY EVANS

"Win for Abe Kelly."

That is the slogan the football warriors of Baylor University in Texas are seeing before them this fall. For Baylor, with no captain in flesh, has a spiritual leader in Abe Kelly.

An extremely unusual situation exists at Baylor. At the close of the 1925 season, Abe Kelly, outstanding star of the eleven, was elected captain. Baylor had finished second in the Southwestern Conference championship and, with most of the regulars returning, 1927 held promise of being a big year.

Hardly had the season closed, however, when tragedy descended on the stage. A terrible catastrophe, that almost wiped out the Baylor football team, befell the leading athletes of that famous old Texas institution of learning. Captain "Abe" Kelly was one of the victims.

Let us go back to last winter for the details.

Twenty-two Baylor athletes were driving through a drizzling rain in a big motor bus, en route to Austin, where on Saturday, Jan. 22, they were to meet Texas University in a basketball game. It was a carefree, happy crowd of collegians In true "rah rah" style, the boys whiled the hours away in song on the trip.

Darkness, coupled with the driving rain, made it difficult to see. Perhaps the enthusiasm and happy-go-lucky spirit of the athletes got the better of the man at the wheel and caused him to become careless. Perhaps his vision was badly blurred by the elements.

[illegible] in a twinkling of an [illegible] was struck by a fast express train.

It was a terrible accident. The 22 royal sons of Baylor were thrown high into the air by the impact, the bus entirely demolished. Ten of the group were killed. Among the number whose lives were lost was Clyde "Abe" Kelly, captain-elect of the 1927 football team.

Kelly was one of the greatest athletes in the southwest. He was very fast, a wonder in a broken field, one of the best passers in Texas and, without a doubt, the best punter in the Southwestern Conference. Not only did he star on the gridiron, but he was the clever catcher of the varsity baseball team and a forward of note on the basketball five.

Of an engaging personality, he was one of the most popular athletes in the history of Baylor.

Kelly was self-made. For seven years he had worked his way through four years of high school training and three years of his college course, as a member of the Waco (Texas) fire department.

After the 12 players who were fortunate enough to escape death recovered sufficiently to once again think of athletics, it was decided not to elect another captain to take the place of Kelly. The thought was that his spirit would hover over Baylor this year and spur the eleven on to greater deeds in his memory.

Before each game this year Coaches Morley Jennings and Jim Crow are naming some player to look after the usual duties that are a part of the captaincy but, to the players, a vision of Kelly, "Fighting Abe," will constantly be before the eleven men wearing the Baylor colors. Kelly will be their captain in spirit if not in person.

Alabama Winning Streak Ends After 22 Victories

Atlanta, Ga.—A winning streak that had stretched through 24 games, including two tie battles, was broken here this season when Georgia Tech defeated Alabama a few days ago.

It was the first time since Centre's victory in 1924 that Alabama had been beaten, and the first time since [illegible] Southern Conference [illegible] beaten Alabama. Wallace [illegible] coach at Alabama [illegible] established one of the most [illegible] of victories in football history.

[illegible] to the Georgia Tech game this year, Wade's teams at Alabama have played 43 games and have [illegible] of 26 victories, four losses and three ties over that period Syracuse and Florida in 1923, Centre in 1924 and Georgia Tech this year are the only teams to beat Alabama under Wade.

Wade also has to his credit the distinction of representing the east in the annual Tournament of Roses game twice in succession, his team defeating Washington in 1926 and tying Stanford this past year.

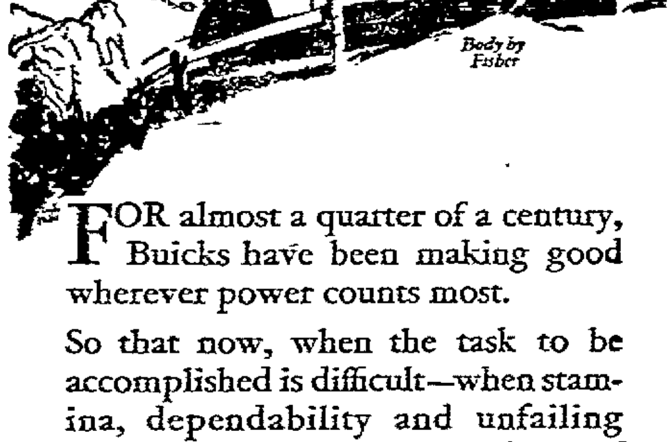

After the defeat by Tech, Wallace Wade praised the team of W. A. Alexander as the best Alabama had met since Wade had been at the latter school

As far as his own team was concerned, Wade refused to be downhearted

He said the team would come [illegible] winning easily in its next game.

RADIO REVOLUTION IS PREDICTED BY APPLETON DEALER

F. H. Zahrt Says Keen Competition Will Result in Finer Programs

That this season will witness a revolution in radio is the belief of F. H. Zahrt, Stewart-Warner radio dealer of the Fox River Hardware company one of the retailers of radio equipment in this community.

In explaining his statement, Mr. Zahrt said, "This revolution, however, need not cause worry, for it will have more to do with an astonishing increase of interest on the part of broadcast listeners than it will with radical changes in the design and construction of sets.

"The revolution that I refer to is itself a product of an unnoticed revolution in radio broadcasting. A year ago, to be perfectly frank, programs put on the air by a great many broadcasting stations were nothing but "hash." Some of them would not have held an audience in a ten-cent vaudeville theatre. Since that time, these same broadcasting stations have realized that public interest had begun to wane a bit and that they were losing their listeners. They were forced to action. The only thing that they could do is what they have done — raised the standard of entertainment furnished. Strong competition has developed between broadcasting stations for the favor of fans and a great deal of money is now being spent to get new talent for radio broadcasting. The station today that gives out poor programs is the exception rather than the rule. The fact that individual stations have bettered their programs, together with the development of chain broadcasting, makes it possible for people in every part of the United States to hear excellent entertainment all year 'round.

FINER PROGRAMS

"Now, every hour of every day there is something interesting and worth while on the air—music, lectures, bridge lessons, news of the day, cooking recipes, stock reports, playlets, opera—almost anything you desire.

"In the past, during the summer months, atmospheric conditions made radio reception somewhat unsatisfactory. People who lived at long distances from broadcasting stations were often dissatisfied with the reception. As a result, many of them put their radio sets away for the summer. Now broadcasting stations of superpower have completely drowned out that evil. During even the hottest days the nearer by broadcasting stations can be received clearly and without interference from static.

"Another thing that will act as an accessory to this revolution," stated Mr. Zahrt, is the fact that radio is long past the experimental stage. Radio receiving equipment has become stabilized. The day of the manufactured freak set is passed. The analogy between radio and the automobile is startling. Some of us can remember 20 years ago when there were many freak motor cars on the market. They have all passed, and we now have certain standard principles of transportation adhered to generally by motor car manufacturers. Of course, there will be improvements in radio, just as there have been improvements in automobiles, but they will be refinements rather than innovations. We realize, of course, that the engineers have not finished the work, but the fact remains that radio engineers today generally do not anticipate any startling new discoveries. In fact, the underlying principles of radio, as we know it today have been known for over twenty years.

"SEASONABLE" MARKET

"Like the automobile, radio, too, has vanquished the spectre of the "seasonable" market. When automobiles first came, people generally purchased their cars during the months of nice weather. Nowadays, however, automobiles are sold every month in the year. Because of increased interest in broadcasting and the advent of super power stations that make reception possible during all seasons of the year, the same situation now applies to radio.

Mr. Zahrt further added that it was his belief that the fall months of 1927, as well as the winter months, will show a surprising increase in the sale of radio sets.

SHOWER BATHS NEW HOME CONVENIENCE IN PLUMBING LINE

Electrically Equipped Sink for Dish Washing Also Growing in Favor

"Nearly one-third of the people putting in new plumbing equipment today, or building new homes, are making arrangements for shower baths," said Reinhard Wenzel of the Reinhard Wenzel plumbing company, 223 N. Appleton-st. "The remaining two-thirds of the people with plumbing in their homes still prefer the bath tub."

When asked what caused the trend to shower baths Mr. Wenzel said that young people today demand that their homes be equipped in that manner and that those who do not have the full say about what plumbing fixtures are to go into a house influence their parents to put in showers.

There is also a trend nowadays toward colored plumbing fixtures, Mr. Reinhard said, the desire being to have designs harmonize with walls, or to suit the mood of the particular persons who are having the fixtures installed. With this respect, however, white still is the predominating color because of the ease with which it can be kept clean.

Not only is modern plumbing equipment in greater demand but also other modern equipment which goes with plumbing. Among these devices is the electrically equipped sink for washing dishes. Demand for these is increasingly monthly for use in the homes of more well-to-do people.

At the present time the Reinhard Wenzel Plumbing company is being rushed with repair work which is to be done before cold weather sets in. Mr. Wenzel warns that there still is considerable plumbing equipment in Appleton in need of repair and changes and unless the work is done now both the home owner and the plumber probably will be inconvenienced if the breakdown comes at some time when the weather is exceedingly cold.

Babson Says Wholesale Business Is Improving

Babson Park, Mass. — Roger W. Babson in his weekly interview today, discusses the wholesale trade situation and comments on the conditions confronting wholesalers.

"The wholesale business has six or more distinct functions and the man who falls down on any one of these fails,' Mr. Babson said. "Yet the average wholesaler lumps all of his business together and has no special knowledge of which functions are paying him and which are costing him money. Hence, the first need of most wholesalers is a functional study of their business. I am all the more convinced of this since learning that a net profit of 3 per cent is about the average of the most successful wholesalers and that this—owing to chain stores and increased costs of doing business—is gradually declining.

"Another difficulty facing wholesalers is that they are forced to carry a very great variety of items. Some wholesalers are purchasing from 700 or more different manufacturers. This means that these wholesalers really cannot be acquainted with but a small proportion of these goods and certainly cannot give any attention to "pushing" them. As a result they act merely as order takers and trust more or less to luck and the law of averages as to what they sell. Of course this situation is being remedied. The advice of bankers, the use of business statistics, the service of public accountants and the good work being done by the department of commerce all are working in favor of the wholesaler in order to reduce the items carried and the territory covered. This tends to eliminate dead stock, increases turnover, reduces expense and makes it unnecessary for wholesalers to borrow as much from the banks as he used to.

'It is interesting to note that after taking these difficulties into consideration and realizing the burden which the wholesalers are obliged to bear, one finds a reasonably satisfactory situation in the wholesale business at the present time. Information obtained from a group of 77 representative Chambers of Commerce shows 52 cities reporting a satisfactory wholesale situation, while 20 cities report the situation as fair and only five cities indicate poor conditions. My study of this latter group shows that these cities are not at all in any one vicinity, but rather, fairly well distributed. This would tend to indicate that on the whole there are no large sections showing poor wholesale conditions.

"The two states which stand out with the most generally satisfactory wholesale trade are Georgia and Texas. Here cotton has been a big help. Among the favorable cities I would specially mention Augusta and Macon, in Georgia; Beaumont and Galveston, Texas; Oklahoma City. Little Rock, Ark.; Lincoln, Neb.; Charlotte, N. C.; Huntington, W. Va.; Norfolk, Va.; Harrisburg, Pa.; and New Haven, Conn.; Rochester N. Y., although below the 1926 peak shows up well; while the city of Boston reports considerable improvement. Improvement is shown in certain cities of Michigan, Ohio, Iowa, Kansas, and Minnesota. From all these reports I would conclude that the wholesale trade is on the up grade.

"My study of present day wholesale conditions shows that the lines doing the greatest business are those which are really necessary for the welfare of the people. For example, I find that foodstuffs, clothing and building materials lead all other lines. I find 23 cities in which foodstuffs are amongst the best selling wholesale lines. Fifteen cities show clothing as one of their more important wholesale items. The building materials are doing well in 17 cities, thus indicating that building, although on the decline in most sections, is still holding up well in certain districts.

"Although the above-mentioned lines lead the wholesale business, yet there are others which are also doing well. For instance, in Atlanta, Ga., we find a good furniture market. Boston and Shreveport, La., report a fair business in the wholesale electrical equipment line. Jackson, Mich., is doing a good business in automotive equipment. These and other similar lines are holding up well in practically all sections of the country.

"The wholesale business has not been the basis of many flotations. I know of no such companies having bond issues which have been publicly offered and only a few have sold preferred stocks to the public. Almost no strictly wholesale concerns have their securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Many manufacturing stocks and many stocks of concerns doing a retail business are actively dealt in, but bankers and brokers instinctively keep away from securities of companies doing only a wholesale business. Yet the wholesaler has a definite function to perform and there always must be wholesalers so long as there are small independent retailers. Once, when asking a prominent banker why he never offered the securities of a strictly wholesale house, he replied: 'Wholesalers are confronted by two paradoxes. (1) To be a wholesaler one must carry a great many lines and thousands of items, and yet an analysis of their business shows that the fewer lines and items that they carry the more profit they make. (2) To be a wholesaler one must cover a large territory while analysis shows that after this territory expands beyond a certain limited area the law of diminishing returns begins to work.'

"The wholesale business is very vitally connected with general business conditions. While the business of a retailer may contract only six per cent during a business depression, the business of a wholesaler may decline 30 to 40 per cent. The wholesaler acts as sort of a spring or cushion which must absorb most of the declining business and most of the falling prices. A chart of the wholesale business almost parallels the movement of the Babsonchart, which now registers about normal. Yet every cloud has a silver lining. The wholesale trade has not become involved with the instalment business. The wholesaler has practically none of the three or four billions of dollars of instalment paper now held by manufacturers and retailers. Moreover, as I have said above, wholesalers have a legitimate economic function. Perhaps as they are reduced in number by economic pressure, those remaining may develop a very profitable business and the time may yet come when the securities of wholesale concerns may be more attractive than those of either manufacturers or retailers."

FIRST AIRMAIL SENT IN FRANCE IN 1870

Pittsburg—(AP)—What may have been the first successful delivery of mail by air was made 57 years ago in France.

Out of a mass of mail stamps of famed flights collected by Harry A. Truby, of New Kensington, vice president of the Aearo-Philatelic Society of America is one recording that on Sept. 23, 1870, M. Jules Durouf flew from Paris in a balloon with messages to Craconville, France. At that time, Paris was withstanding the Prussian siege.

Truby's collection of mail stamps includes those used in many pioneering flights over various sections of the globe.

PEOPLE BECOMING EDUCATED TO USE, VALUE OF PAINTS

Little Painting Done in Fall but Busy 1928 Season Is Forecast

"Every year more people are becoming educated to the building saving qualities of paint," says A. H. Millen, president and general manager of the eGneral Paint company, 118 N. Bennett-st. "One peculiar thing about farmers, though, is that if they are of the old school and have never painted their buildings no one is going to talk them into doing it at this stage in their life. They just cannot see its advantages and therefore refuse to have it done."

Education of the public to the advantages of paint is bringing results, said Mr. Millen. Slogans such as "Save the surface and you save all," have taken a strong hold on the more progressive farmers and they are inquiring into the advantages of painting.

Farmers are being better educated in this generation and it would be surprising to the average city folk to learn how much Mrs. Farmer really knows about colors, harmonizing them and the use of paint for interior work, Mr. Millen said. Every day some farmer's wife comes to the offices of the paint company or one of the company's salesmen and inquires about the best paints for interior decorating to brighten a room or harmonize with certain draperies she intends to use.

General Paint company paints are being used in practically every instance by farmers in this locality. One reason is that they know General paints are as good as can be made, for only the best materials are used in their manufacture. In the case of colored paints, only the most positive methods of mixing the pigment with white paint are used.

Though little painting is being done at this time of the year, the past season has been one of the most productive for the General Paint company in some time. Indications are that next year business will be still better because hundreds of users of General paints have "passed the word" on to their neighbors that General paints are a product that can be depended upon to do all that is claimed for them.

English is being taught over the radio in Japan. Recently the instructor, in a lecture on politeness, said the best way to learn such expressions was to bump into English-speaking persons on the street and remark, "I beg your pardon."

More than 2,000,000 pounds of copper were required for the minting of $5,115,675 one-cent and five-cent pieces which the United States turned out last year.

JACK LOCKWILL'S FOREST RANGERS

"We're not thieves!" growled McNally resentfully. His words and manner enraged the hunchback. "But you're sneaks!" Old Hunchy cried shrilly, his snaggy teeth gleaming in the midst of his beard. "Git out! I've been pestered enough! Git!" "Don't argue with a lunatic, Tom," said Jack, taking McNally's arm. The snarling man followed them through the door.

As the boys moved away across the clearing, they were dazzled by strange flashes of light which played over them, striking into their eyes and nearly blinding them.

"What the dickens does that mean?" chattered Willie as they plunged into the woods again. "Almost put my blinkers out! Queer things sure are happening around here!"

When they had followed an old logging road into a smaller clearing, the flashes danced over them again. Jack laughed. "Look!" he said, pointing over the treetops toward the bald peak of Enchanted Mountain. "It's from the heliograph of the fire-lookout up there. I believe he's seen us with his binoculars, and is trying to signal us. I can read the Morse code." (To Be Continued)

MUSEUM SITES TO BE CONSIDERED BY SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Public Collection Outgrows Space Available in New London Library

Special to Post-Crescent

New London—A special committee was appointed on Thursday evening at the regular monthly meeting of the library board at library hall, to investigate what sites might be found available for the location of a public museum. Those named to act upon the committee were the Rev. Francis S. Dayton, the Rev. Adolph Spiering and Herbert Ritchie. A report of their findings is to be made soon. A price was named by the board which will limit the purchase fund for the site.

The library trust fund of $20,000 must not only erect the museum building, but must provide the maintenance of the building and pay its custodian's salary. This, the board admits, is not a large sum to begin upon, but it is felt that with so large a museum collection as is already in the possession of the city it is only fitting that some more adequate housing be maintained. The collection of Indian relics alone, the private collection of the late Mrs. Helen K. Nivens, bequeathed to the museum by her sister, Mrs. John Yates, of California, which is valued at many hundreds of dollars, is kept in a local bank because of the lack of space available at the public library for exhibition purposes. Besides this collection New London possesses a collection of fossila and shells, specimens of mounted birds which ranks fifth in the collections of the state. These, because of crowded space, are crowded together in the basement of the library and it, has been repeatedly pointed out, no better condition can exist without a fireproof building for housing purposes.

Besides this discussion of matters pertaining to the library came up. A carload of coal has been bought from the Rice Transfer company of this city, which it is believed, will furnish fuel for nearly all of the winter months. The coal was brought at $10.25 per ton.

The rest of the business was chiefly regarding the paying of salaries, incidental costs of book bindery and general upkeep of the library.

NEW LONDON SWAMPS CLINTONVILLE, 84-0

Heavier Red and White Eleven Has Easy Time in Home Gridiron Game

Special to Post-Crescent

New London—New Londoners had an excellent opportunity of seeing the Red and White second team in action Friday afternoon on the local grid. The second string played nearly three quarters of the game, against Clintonville high school, who lost 84 to 0. Starting the walkaway were Sweedy, and Griswold of the regulars, who with 30 yard end runs shot two touchdowns across in the first five minutes of play. A third touchdown followed and after that one followed the other.

Sweedy made a 70 yard run for a touchdown, and Kische, playing with the second team, intercepted several passes for good gains. He also carried the ball for one substantial gains. Soffa gave a good exhibition of drop kicking for the extra point. The Clintonville team was too light for the home boys.

New London's passing has improved considerably in the last week, and the team should make a good showing against the Shawano squad, which they will meet next Tuesday afternoon at Shawano. Only one person is on the injured list and he is Captain Edminister, whose strained ankle is still bothering him.

As We Grow Older

Proper Kidney Action Is More Than Ever Important

As we grow older, there is apt to be a gradual slowing up of bodily functions.

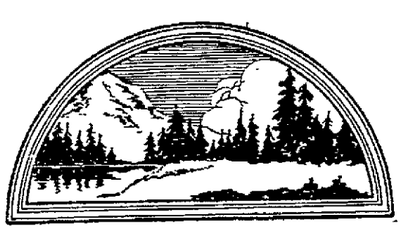

The kidneys are the blood filters. If their action becomes sluggish they do not thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous wastes. This tends to make one tired and achy, with often nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizziness. A common symptom of imperfect kidney action is scanty or burning excretions.

Elderly people recommend DOAN'S PILLS. This tested diuretic is endorsed the country over. Ask Your Neighbor!

DAILY TRAINING SCHOOL COURSE TO START NOV. 2

Madison— (AP) —Another class of dairymen enters the University of Wisconsin dairy training school Nov. 2, to study for a three-month period ending Jan. 26.

The course is "of a practical and general nature and has been designed to train men as expert buttermakers, ice cream makers, city plant operators, cheesemakers, and experts in the manufacture of condensed milk, evaporated milk, milk powder, and other dairy products. Emphasis is also given to the theory involved in these processes," says the course announcement.

As a result of many years of experience, the courses in the dary school have been arranged to meet the needs of four types of men. These are the beginner, with little or no experience; the dairyman with six months or more experience; the owner, operator or manager with several years training in a factory; and the man who has already filled some responsible position and wants further training in a chosen field.

Before receiving a diploma from the university, it is necessary that the student complete two seasons of work in a cheese factory or creamery. One of these seasons must follow the completion of the 12-weeks course in the dairy school.

SPORTSMEN PROTEST PROPOSED ISSUANCE OF SURVEY PERMIT

Izaak Walton League Members Plan Vigorous Protest to Power Commission

Representatives of Izaak Walton league chapters in Green Bay, Oshkosh and Appleton met here Friday evening and planned a vigorous campaign against issuance of a permit to the Wisconsin Michigan Power company for power development of the Wolf river on Menominee Indian reservation.

In the absence of George J. Schneider, congressman from the Ninth district, who was not notified of the intentions of the delegation to meet with him and who was in attendance at another meeting which took him out of the city Friday evening, the delegation met with Samuel Sigman, Mr. Schneider's attorney.

"Our main purpose," declared R. E. Gruenhagen of Oshkosh, who acted as chairman at the meeting, "is to devise ways and means to head off granting of a permit to make this survey, at least until the objectors can state their case before the federal power commission.

"There is a promise by O. C. Merrill, executive secretary of the federal power commission, that nothing would be done until those opposing the issuance of such a permit would be given opportunity to be heard, although reports in the newspapers indicate that the granting of this permit to the Wisconsin Michigan Power company is imminent."

OPPOSED TO PLAN

The delegation unanimously agreed that, in their opinion, the power development of the Wolf river should not be allowed.

They pointed out that "there is no immediate need for the additional power that can be developed on the reservation and there is no assurance that if this power is is developed that the Indians of the Menominee tribe will gain any of the benefits therefrom."

The delegation declared that the money the Indians might realize would, under the present policy of the bureau of Indian affairs, be turned into the treasury of the United States to the credit of these Indians but that "the Indians would see very little of this money and would have to go on begging as they have in the past for what little they do get."

Another argument of the delegation was the the reservation, kept intact and in its natural state, provides the best type of a home land for the Indian who likes outdoor life.

"INDIANS WOULD OBJECT"

"If the Indians had the matter placed before them in a clear light, they would be opposed to the granting of any permit that would develop the water power on the Menominee Indian reservation, especially when without an act of Congress there would be no assurance of getting any pay direct to them," the delegates said.

A committee was appointed to bring to the attention of the Izaak League state convention on Nov. 10-11, the need for fighting issuance of the permit. The committee was named as follows: L. G. Brunner, Shawano, chairman; R. G. Sykes, Appleton; R. E. Gruenhagen, Oshkosh; Henry Michels, Fond du Lac; and Mr. Grebels, Green Bay.

Delegates who attended the meeting were: Alfred Bradford, Appleton; Mr. Brunner, Shawano; Dr. Smith, Green Bay; R. B. Mader, Shawano; Mrs. Ben Hooper, Oshkosh; Mrs. A. P. Kannenberg, Oshkosh; Mrs. P. J. Koehn, Oshkosh; Mr. Gruenhagen, Oshkosh; Clyde B. Terrill, Oshkosh; A. P. Kannenberg, Oshkosh; C. J. Seims, Oshkosh; E. M. Stondall, Oshkosh; B. J. Koehn, Oshkosh; Mr. Sigman, Appleton.

DUE POSTAGE MUST BE PAID IN CASH, RULING

Postage due on letters and other mail matter must be paid in cash, according to Fred Felix Wettengel, acting postmaster. There is a tendency among many Appleton persons to offer carriers stamps for postage due and in some cases the carriers have accepted them. Carriers have been asked not to accept them and warning has been issued that it is a violation of postal regulations.

LARGE NUMBER OF BUYERS AT MONTHLY STOCK FAIR

Young pigs were bringing an average price of $2 each at the monthly pig fair held at the fair grounds on S. Walnut-st Saturday. Older pigs, however, were bringing proportionately higher prices while corn fed pigs weighing approximately 100 pounds were selling at $8. There was a good demand for corn fed pigs but very few of this kind were to be found. Farmers have no corn for feeding purposes it was said due to the late crop.

The supply of small pigs was as large as any time this summer seasonal weather having brought out a large number of farmers. Buyers from Milwaukee, Chicago and northern Illinois were getting the greater part of the supply.

NEAR $5,000 QUOTA FOR CITY ADVERTISING

Community Builders Report on Progress of Effort to Sell City to Its People

A large portion of the $5,000 quota of the Appleton Community Builders has been secured, according to a report of the publicity committee of the chamber directors Friday noon at Hotel Northern. One signboard of the campaign has been erected and the others will be set up within the next week. The direct mail advertising has been started and the newspaper campaign will open on Saturday, Nov. 5.

Officers of a Chicago Publishing company, which may be asked to move its offices here, will be invited to Appleton for a conference with members of the local industrial committee, it was announced. The local committee also is planning to complete another important transaction concerning a local plant.

No speaker has been secured as yet for the annual farm festival and dinner which will be held at Armory G iln November, but members of the rural affairs committee are negotiating with a prominent legislator for the event.

A report of the thirteenth annual convention of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries, held last week in Columbus, Ohio, given by Hugh G. Corbett, local chamber secretary, completed the directors' meeting. Mr. Corbett was a group chairman at the meeting.

TOWN WILL ASK COUNTY FOR HELP FOR ROADS

A special meeting of the Town of Grand Chute has been called for Nov. 11 according to A. W. Laabs, chairman of the town board to prepare petitions for county aid on county trunk highways. The town appropriated money for two projects at its last meeting but this action was held illegal because the law permits only one project during a year.

No county aid was received by the town this last year because Grand Chute together with a number of others drew up their petitions after the annual meeting of the county board which made the petitions illegal. Petitions from town boards must be made previous to the annual meeting of the county board.

BUILDING PERMITS

Two building permits were issued Saturday by John Weiland, city building inspector. One was for construction of a garage and residence of four rooms and bath by Alvin W. Mueller, at 907 W. Spring-st. The other was to the Fox River Tractor company, 1020 N. Rankin-st, for construction of a frame and steel warehouse, 36 feet wide and 106 feet long.

Seventeen building permits had been issued during the week up to noon Saturday, for building estimated to cost $37,950. That is about four times as great a figure as that of the week before.

LATEST NEWS OF THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

COMMENCE BUILDING NEW OAKLAND PLANT

$3,000,000 Assembly Factory in Michigan Will Be Completed Next Spring

Pontiac, Mich.—Another important step in the huge expansion program of the Oakland Motor Car company which will provide the Oakland All-American Six with a new $3,000,000 car assembly plant, duplicating the model assembly plant of the Pontiac Six, came this week when excavating started upon a spur track for railroad delivery of the thousands of tons of construction materials.

According to A. R. Glancy, president and general manager, the new plant will be finished and in operation by next spring. Its construction is the most ambitious expansion contemplated by the company since the completion early this year of a $15,000,000 construction program which greatly extended the Oakland Six factories and erected for the exclusive manufacture of the Pontiac Six a complete $12,000,000 group of buildings.

The new Oakland assembly building will be 540 by 640 feet in size, of two-story monitor type construction with basement. It will be entirely fire-proof, the building materials being steel, concrete and brick. It will contain twin assembly lines each one-quarter of a mile long, their total initial production capacity being 500 units per day of nine hours. H. R. Boyer, works engineer, who worked out plans for the new structure in conjunction with Albert H. Kahn Inc, Detroit architects, states that the two lines will have a reserve capacity which with additional tooling and manpower will bring the nine-hour production up to 720 units.

The Oakland assembly plant will adjoin that of the Pontiac, both sets of assembly lines receiving their car frames (the first assembly step) from a power crane which will lift the frames directly from railroad cars. As in the Pontiac assembly plant converging lines of Oakland assembly material will be timed with scientific accuracy to insure the delivery of component parts at exactly the proper moment.

Connected with the car assembly building will be a commodious new addition to the car shipping building. This structure will be one story high, 108 feet wide by 780 feet long and of materials similar to those used in the assembly building.

In addition to the new assembly and shipping buildings, the plans also call for an entire new enameling unit for the treatment of Oakland fenders and sheet metal. The Fisher Body Corporation power plant which now supplies Pontiac Six factories with steam and compressed air, will be enlarged to meet the additional requirements of the new Oakland assembly plant. The power plant enlargement alone will cost an additional $210,000.

The Oakland motor and sheet metal departments will continue to manufacture in the present motor and sheet metal buildings. The old assembly building will be used for the storage of materials necessary to maintain uninterrupted production.

The spur track now under construction for the railway delivery of building material at the site of the new structure subsequently will form a portion of a five track "railroad yard" all on the property of the Oakland Motor Car Company for the exclusive use of the Oakland Six factories. The Pontiac plant already has a "railroad yard" of its own.

The present Oakland Motor Car Company railroad spurs lead off the Grand Trunk railroad. The Pere Marquette railroad also is planning to connect directly with the Oakland property. This move will increase considerably the Oakland-Pontiac facilities for the direct reception of raw materials and the shipment of completed automobiles.

BENT RIMS ENEMIES OF LONG TIRE LIFE

Misshaped and Rusty Clincher Rims Cut Down Tire Mileage

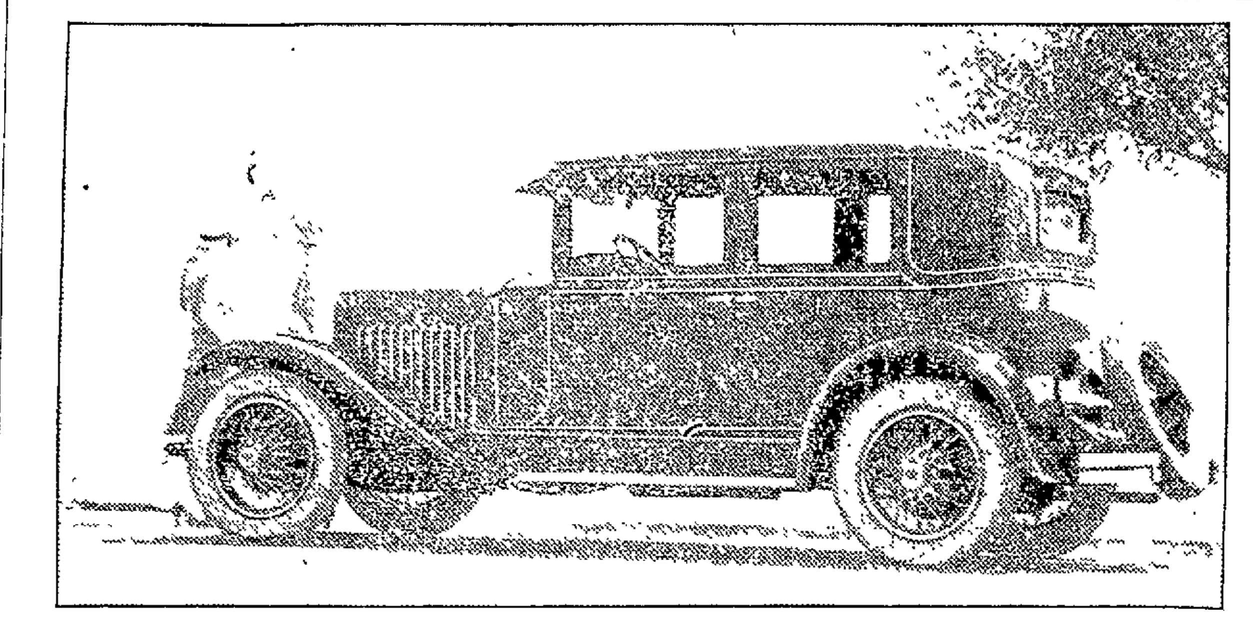

Clincher rims, with which more than 30 per cent of all passenger cars are equipped, are rapidly reaching the stage where their age and condition is causing the premature destruction of tires by rim cut, according to tire manufacturers. Rusty rims and rims bent out of shape from long use are the greatest enemies to tires, Miller tire men claim.

Since the advent of the balloon tire and its adoption as regular equipment on cars that were formerly equipped with clincher rims, the use of clincher rims has been confined to former models. Statistics show that these rims are often replaced; motorists desiring to replace rims and wheels that are no longer serviceable [illegible]

ANOTHER LA SALLE BODY TYPE

Another new addition to the La Salle line of body types is the Fisher-built five-passenger town sedan — a smart closed car with close-coupled seating arrangements. USE FERTILIZERS ON RUBBER PLANTATIONS

U. S. Rubber Company President Praises Use of Bud Grafting in Sumatra

C. B. Seger, president of the United States Rubber Company, authorizes the following statement:

Apropos of reports in the newspapers that bud grafting applied to rubber cultivation will greatly increase the yield, we estimate that the ultimate yield on the latest planted areas (planted with budded stock) in our plantations in Sumatra and Malaya, will be 1,000 pounds per acre per annum, as compared with 350 pounds per acre, which is the average yield of rubber plantations the world over. Our own plantations yielded 441 pounds per acre in 1926.

The large yield on our plantations is due to the application of fertilizers, seed selection, and other scientific methods we have followed since we started operations in the Far East in 1910. It is to these that we look to increase the yield of our acreage to the 1,000 pound mark.

It may come as a surprise to those who have but lately heard of bud grafting as a means of increasing the productivity of the rubber tree, and who thought the method startlingly new, to learn that of the 83,000 acres planted by the United States Rubber Plantations more than 30,000 acres are planted with either budded stock or highly selected seed. This area is greater than all the rest of the world together has planted in budded stock, and when it comes into full bearing, will greatly increase the already large yield per acre that the Company is obtaining from its 52,000 acres of earlier plantings now in tapping.

The real problem in budding is to find a strain that not only will run true to yield through succeeding generations of trees, but in other desirable characteristics as well. It takes several generations of trees to be sure that a strain has all the desirable characteristics, including high yield.

We now have, as the result of ten years' work on budding experiments, segregated 27 strains which we have approved and which we are using exclusively in all of our new plantings.

The production of Hevea rubber in all British India, including Burma, in 1926 was 22,513,285 pounds. The United States Rubber Plantations, Inc., produced 22,303,360 pounds in that year, or approximately the same amount.

On December 31, 1926, India had 135,509 acres of Hevea rubber planted. The United States Rubber Plantations, Inc. had 82,583 acres. India had in bearing during that period 99,763 acres; the United States Rubber Plantations, Inc., 51,365 acres. India's production averaged 229 pounds per acre; that of the United States Rubber Plantations, Inc., 441 pounds. India's plantations employed 44,893 people. The United States Rubber Plantations Inc., employed 22,392.

BATTERY IMPORTANT PART OF AUTOMOBILE

Upkeep of Poor Battery Is Much Greater Than First Investment

"In the battery business we find bargain hunters just the same as in any other merchandising business," says Al Schroeder, local Willard battery dealer. "Few stop to consider the cause for the low prices, but see prices only."

The result is they are continually having trouble and the upkeep of their bargain soon eats up the difference in price.

The old saying "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" holds true [illegible] price element. Mr. Schroeder says that he has seen many car owners come in with cheap batteries not properly sized for their cars and which are therefore practically a waste of money.

A battery to an automobile is just as important as [illegible] strength for later life.

Sale Of New Buick Models Shatters All Old Records

Flint, Mich—Buick sales since the introduction of new models in July, have shattered all records in Buick history, C. W. Churchill, general sales manager of the Buick Motor company, announced Saturday. The July August and September total this year is 82,955 cars, as compared with 70,941 cars sold during the corresponding period in 1926.

The average monthly increase during the last three months, over the corresponding period in 1926, amounts to more than 4,000 cars," said Mr. Churchill. "This represents an average increase of 1,000 cars a week, or considerably better than 100 a day.

"When it is recalled that these are retail sales figures, and not mere production totals, such a record seems to us highly significant. It means that the instantaneous public reception of the new Buicks was not just a flash in the pan, but rather the forerunner of a sustained demand for Buicks, all over the country, based on the recognition that here was such style, comfort, and performance as best met the public's conception of value in a motor car."

FALCON'S SPEEDSTER IN POPULAR DEMAND

Production of Plant Has Been Stepped Up Far in Excess of First Plans

Demand for the new Falcon-Knight Gray Ghost speedster which made its initial appearance a short time ago as an addition to the Falcon Motors Corporation's line of Knight engined sixes, continues beyond the original expectations of company officials, according to a statement made at the Falcon executive offices this week in Detroit.

Every effort is being put forth at the Falcon plant in Elyria, O., to meet this demand and production has been stepped up far in excess of the original schedules to keep pace with the orders that have poured in to the sales department from all sections of the country.

Several important factors have entered into the immediate popularity won by the new Falcon-Knight model, officials of the Falcon Motors corporation point out. One has been the high standard of performance set by the other Falcon-Knight sixes since their initial introduction on the market about six months ago. The other factor is the decided trend of motor car buyers to cars powered by the Knight sleeve-valve engine, the type of power plant employed in all Falcon-Knight cars.

"Before introducing the Falcon-Knight Gray Ghost speedster we made a careful study of the present day trend of the market, and this trend revealed a rapidly increasing demand for a smart car of this type," says John A. Nichols, Jr., president of the Falcon organization.

"Of course the success of the Falcon-Knight six also may be traced directly to the unquestionable trend of motor car buyers towards those cars powered by the Knight sleeve-valve engine. The power, speed, stamina, smoothness and economy of the Knight sleeve-valve engine, together with its admitted longer life and freedom from the troubles so common in other types of power plants, has established for this engine a leading position in the automobile field.

"In the production of the Falcon-Knight six we have placed on the American market for the first time a Knight engined car selling in the $1,000 price class. The response of the buying public indicates that we have struck a new and fertile sales field for this popular priced Knight powered car and the future outlook is conspicuously bright."

OLDSMOBILE CYLINDER RINGS HIGHLY TESTED

Must Pass Examinations for Roundness, Thickness, Flatness and Gap Size

It is not unusual to hear an automobile owner remark that he intends putting new compression rings on his pistons. The operation is not considered one calling for a high degree of skill, but if the owner were to put the rings he intends using to the same tests as are required of all rings put into Oldsmobiles at the factory he would require considerable equipment and training just to select rings that would function most efficiently.

Every compression ring used at the Oldsmobile factories must pass four tests—for roundness, flatness, thickness and gap size. Two "radiant" light machines and two sets of gauges are used for these tests.

To give perfect results and eliminate any chance of side wall wear, a compression ring should be as perfectly round as is the cylinder. To insure this every ring is placed into a cylindrical fixture, the inside diameter of which is exactly that of an Oldsmobile engine cylinder. This fixture is placed upon the glass top of an illuminated housing. That portion of the glass inside the inner diameter of the ring is blackened so that light only shows in a circle of the thickness of the ring. If the ring is not perfectly round a ray of light is seen between the outer edge of the ring and the side of the fixture. In such cases the ring is rejected.

To make positive that rings are flat and parallel, each ring is placed upon a hollow, gourd-like device containing an electric lamp and having a perfectly flat, circular top approximately three inches in diameter. A lid-like cover is lowered over the ring. As the lower surface of the lid and the upper surface of the fixture are parallel within .0001 inch, the slightest variation in flatness or parallelism is instantly shown by a light ray.

Oldsmobile engineers have determined that a gap with limits of .003 to .013 inch gives most efficient results. All compression rings in Oldsmobiles must be within these limits by being to pass a test by being placed in a fixture and the gap measured by a "feeler" or thickness gauge.

The thickness of the ring is tested on another gauge to insure that it is within .0005 inch of the dimension specified.

GREATER PRODUCTION EXPECTED BY DODGE

President of Corporation Believes That 1928 Will Be Big Year

Detroit, — E. G. Wilmer, president of Dodge Brothers, Inc., returned last week from Europe convinced that that American automotive industry will continue to dominate the world for many years to come.

"Through the use of electric power automatic machinery and mass sales methods," said Mr. Wilmer, "American motor car manufacturers have placed their products far ahead of the Europeans both in quality and price. As a result, American workmen receive high wages, while the American manufacturers give the greatest dollar value to their customers. Our own company's export business is steadily increasing and Dodge Brothers' export business this fall has run 30 per cent ahead of last autumn.

"Dodge Brothers securities are selling far below their value, which has materially increased in the past two years. The company has an earned surplus of about $29,000,000 and a strong current asset position. Interest and preferred dividends for the full year were earned by a wide margin in the first nine months and there is no foundation for the current rumors of the passing of the dividends."

Mr. Wilmer believes that 1928 will be a big year for the automotive industry and for general business.

"Due largely to the transition at the Ford plant," he said, "automobile production for the entire industry in the United States has fallen off more than 630,000 cars for the first nine months of 1927 as compared with the same period last year. This represents a very substantial accumulation of orders. Perhaps 1,000,000 persons who normally would have purchased new and used cars this year have been deferring their purchases. These people will soon be ready to buy. Every automobile dealer in the country should receive a share of the business which has been dammed up for months."

"Dodge Brothers will be prepared to enjoy in 1928 the biggest business in its history. For a period of 18 months we have been engaged almost exclusively in this readjustment of manufacturing facilities which will permit us to give the public the greatest dollar value ever offered in motor cars. During this period of readjustment of facilities passenger car output and sales have necessarily been curtailed. On the other hand our commercial car and truck business, which comprises about 30% of our volume, is showing a steady increase and I anticipate that Dodge Brothers passenger car sales in 1928 will be the largest in the history of the company."

DISSATISFACTION LED TO STUDEBAKER RISE

Engineers Are Continually Hunting for Methods of Improving Product

One of the strangest paradoxes of American business is found in the engineering department of the Studebaker Corporation, which is celebrating its seventy-fifth anniversary this year. The paradox is this—Studebaker's engineers succeed because they are the most dissatisfied group of men in the entire Studebaker organization.

Efficiency engineers and high-pressure business executives have long contended that success follows satisfaction. A dissatisfied man can never climb the heights of immortality, say the efficiency wise-acres.

Not so with Studebaker's engineers. Never can a Studebaker engineer lean back in his chair and say "there's a job well done." Never can he call anything "perfect." Always he must bear in mind that "it might be better" or "it is better, but it isn't good enough yet."

Studebaker engineers are equipped with every modern facility for making better automobiles. In addition to an 800 acre Proving Ground where all models undergo withering tests of practical driving under all possible conditions, are electrical, chemical and physical laboratories and an elaborate experimental engineering laboratory, recently enlarged, at the Studebaker plants in South Bend. Manned by experts in their highly specialized fields, these laboratories and the Proving Ground provide complete facilities for testing everything that goes into the manufacture of a Studebaker product. Literally everything, from the cloth that covers the deep cushioned seats to the steels used for the [illegible] is are tested.

YOUNG DIRECTOR

The directing head of Studebaker's engineering staff is Delmar G. Roos, who is regarded as one of the finest motor car engineers in the United States. He is a young man who has scored many impressive successes in the design and construction of fine cars.

Mr. Roos received his technical education at Cornell University. Since his graduation he has been connected with the General Electric company, [illegible]

Others on the Studebaker staff of engineers—the men who are never satisfied—include Leon A. Chaminade, James R. Hughes, Charles Link, Karl Herrmann, John A. C. Warner, Robert F. Kohr, Maurice A. Thorne, Dr. E. C. Newcomb and K. M. Wise. All are celebrated in different departments of automotive engineering. All are well known in engineering circles. The name of H. R. Dietrich, one of America's foremost custom body designers, also belongs in this roster of Studebaker's engineers, for it was Mr. Dietrich who designed the bodies of the beautiful Erskine Six models.

MOTORCYCLE PACKAGE TRUCK IS INEXPENSIVE

Cost of Operation by Ohio Concern Less Than One and One-half Cents Per Mile

10,000 miles at one and one-half cents per mile!

At a mere fraction the cost of operating a truck or car the Dixie Sales Company of Dayton, Ohio, is building business with quick, dependable deliveries. Here is what they say:

"We have been operating two Harley-Davidson package trucks for about six months and are very much satisfied. These machines have been driven about 10,000 miles each and have cost us one and one-half cents per mile to operate. The amount of good will we have established among our customers by giving speedy and efficient service is hard to estimate in dollars and cents. Harley-Davison Package Trucks have become permanent pieces of equipment in our business."

What this Tire Company is doing with their Harley-Davidson package trucks is typical of the endorsement merchants in many lines of business are giving after using the Package Trucks in their own business.

The popular Express Type Package Truck has inside dimensions of the front compartment, 18 inches long, 22¾ inches wide and 17 inches high. Rear compartment, 34½ inches long, 22¾ inches wide and 35½ inches high. In addition to this there are seven other body styles of the ever increasing popular Harley-Davidson delivery trucks. For a demonstration of these trucks call Harry Macklin, Phone 510, at the Harley-Davidson Sales and Service, 619 N. Richmond-st.
